ANGLO-AMERICAN RIFT "ERP Aid For Arabs" Accusation Senate Inquiry To Be Held

Talks In Washington

London, May 22. Britain was reported reliably today to have told the United States preservation of Arab friendship is essential to safeguard the Middle East against the march of Communism.

Diplomatic officials said that was Britain's answer to informal American protests against an avowed British intention to stick by treaty obligations to supply Arab nations with arms "unless and until" the United Nations intervenes in Palestine.

Reports were circulating that President Truman would announce the lifting of the arms embargo to Israel very shortly.

probably as soon as the Security Council has rejected the American resolution on Palestine. Whether or not these reports are true they prompted the immediate fear that the end of the ban would put the United States into a position of giving direct military support to Israel, while Britain was regarded as providing the same service for the Transjordan Arab Legion.

An increasing flow of press criticism in this country is meanwhile, being aimed against what is described as Britain's "hand" in the operation of the Arab armies.—Reuter.

RAF Planes In Action

Haifa, May 22. Royal Air Force planes went into action today and shot down four Egyptian planes which attacked the main British airbase in the Haifa enclave.

The British communiqué said an unidentified Spitfire bombed and destroyed two R.A.F. planes and killed three R.A.F. ground personnel and seriously injured six others.

Later, three Spitfires identified as Egyptian attacked and caused further damage whereupon British planes took to the air and shot down two.

"Two other planes (Egyptians) attacked for the third time and both were shot down by the R.A.F."

It is reported two of the six wounded have died.—United Press.

London, May 22. Bridges said his Senate Appropriations Committee will investigate the extent of British financing of the Arab forces' now war with the Jews.

He said it would be "very appropriate" for Congress to reduce the $300,000,000 sum earmarked for Britain if investigation shows United States aid enabled Britain to finance Arab military operations.

ERF funds have already been authorised by Congress but must be approved by Bridges' Committee and the House Appropriations Committee before they are actually made available.

Bridges promised an inquiry after Senator Brewster told the Senate that the British pledge of $80,000,000 to King Abdullah made possible by the economic aid from the United States.

Brewster's assertion brought new demands for repeal of the American embargo on arms shipments to the Middle East which had been effective since last December.—United Press.

One responsible source expressed doubt such an agreement could be reached unless and until a stalemate in the Arab-Jewish war should enable the U.S. and Britain jointly to intervene.

Even then, this source said, Britain would insist acting only in consultation with her Arab "Allies."

British reaction to American support of Israel has ranged from:

1. Alarm at mounting tension between the two countries over Palestine.

2. Indignation over a move in the Senate appropriations committee to investigate whether American financial aid is being used to help Arab armies.

Government sources, declining to be quoted by name, said British aid to the Arab States comes "from the pockets of British taxpayers—as it has in the past."—Associated Press.

Congress Inquiry

Washington, May 22. Senator Styles Bridges said today Congress may trim Britain's share in the ERF if it finds part of the money being used to arm the Arab armies.

The Foreign Office spokesman said Palestine was the main issue of the meeting.

"Palestine is a subject on which differences may arise between the two Governments unless contact is preserved," said the spokesman.

However, it is understood Mr. Bevin and the U.S. Ambassador did not discuss the Senate inquiry.

The United States and Britain are understood to be in constant touch with each other on the Palestine question.

The spokesman refused to comment on the Senate inquiry. He said no comment is called for at this end but added that British obligation to the Arab States began long before Britain got any loans from America.—United Press.

Students Blockade Youth Ministry

Nanking, May 22. The arrest of four students charged with "insulting the national President" and the closing of a satirical campus show precipitated a bitter student demonstration which blockaded the Kuomintang's Youth Ministry headquarters for more than six hours.

Students numbering more than 1,000 finally disbanded after the garrison commander surrendered—two jailed students to them. The other two were released earlier.

A student spokesman said disgraced "secret police" raided on the Youth Ministry gate changed the name of Kuomintang to Kuamintang, meaning: "squeeze people party."

Students who ringed the Ministry entrance shouted anti-Civil War slogans and challenged the police to disband them until their objective was obtained.

Although the Youth Ministry's Secretary-General, Hung Chang, and the students who insulted the National President were "guilty of a crime which is unpardonable in this state in the whole world," they later were released to the student leaders.

After parading past the National Assembly and the Presidential Office, the students disbanded.

They planned additional meetings to protest continuance of the civil war and "corruption in the Government."

Meanwhile, police were still holding the 22-year-old Mukden student who was arrested as he attempted to rush to the side of Chiang-Kai-shek during ceremonies at Sun Yat-sen's tomb. The student said he wanted to present a petition.—Associated Press.

MODERN BUILDING TO REPLACE OLD ST FRANCIS HOTEL

One of Hong Kong's oldest landmarks, which has been the subject of protracted litigation in the local Courts during the past year—No. 13 Queen's Road Central, now occupied by the St. Francis Hotel—will soon disappear, to be replaced by a modern ten storied building.

In an interview with the "Sunday Herald" yesterday, Mr. D. G. Yardley of the Hong Kong Land Investment and Agency Co., Ltd., owners of the premises, revealed that the St. Francis Hotel (1933) Ltd., following their recent unsuccessful appeal to the Full Court, have now agreed to vacate No. 13 Queen's Road Central by the end of July next.

The China Lace Co., which formerly occupied the ground floor of the western wing of No. 13 Queen's Road Central, removed some time ago and are now accommodated in Gloucester Arcade.

Repeated efforts made yesterday to contact the Management of the St. Francis Hotel with a view to ascertaining their future plans proved unavailing.

Windsor House Extension

The premises were purchased by the Land Investment Co. in Jan. 1939. The adjoining premises, No. 11 Queen's Road Central, which have already been demolished, were bought a few months later. Both buildings were bought with a view to their being pulled down and rebuilt.

The idea of the building scheme is to make the proposed new building an extension of Windsor House. Plans for the building were completed prior to the outbreak of the Pacific War.

The Land Investment Co. are the largest land owners in the centre of the city. In the considered opinion of the Company, Nos. 11 and 13 Queen's Road Central form a convenient and practical point at which to start a general and progressive scheme for rebuilding. The Company is so keen on development of this area that it refused an offer of $2,000,000 for No. 11 Queen's Road Central alone.

It is anticipated that the proposed new building will be put up in about 18 months. Portions of the land covered by Nos. 11 and 13 Queen's Road Central will be surrendered to Government for the purpose of widening Ice House Street and Queen's Road Central.

The Land Investment Co. has a waiting list of some 200 applicants for accommodation in the new building and of these applicants, more than 60 are pre-war firms. Four large Chinese banks have also booked accommodation in the new building.

"She refused to tell me why she kept the peanuts in her pocket. Her relative explained that Yang Mei feels 'unhappy' without the peanuts. If she does not have them, she gets depressed."

Yang Mei, who could neither read nor write when she first arrived in Chungking, can now distinguish 80 Chinese characters. She was taught by her relative.

Doctors and scientists in Chungking are still puzzled.

At present, the Land Investment Co. are recovering only $2,780,000 by way of rentals in respect of No. 13 Queen's Road Central. It is expected that $835,000 will be received annually in respect of the proposed new building, which will also include rentals for No. 11 Queen's Road Central.

The total floor area to be available for offices in the new building will be 128,000 square feet, as against the present 47,000 square feet.

The force which consists of four American landing craft, are being converted into floating fortresses at different local dockyards, one of which is the Kowloon Dock. One of the fortresses has already been completed and will proceed to Canton shortly.

The landing craft are being reinforced and equipped each with several fast-firing guns of various types and a 20-foot steel tower to give "spotters" a wide range over the field of operations.

Each of the floating fortresses will have compartments for accommodating at least 100 soldiers, a small arsenal, and radio equipment to keep in contact with the "mother" fortress.

"Yang Mei only drinks water and that very rarely—once or twice a week." Except for her reluctance to talk, everything about her is normal. Observation by doctors showed that all her organs were in normal condition.

The landing craft have a shallow draught and are ideal for pursuing fast pirates craft in the Pearl River-Delta and the South China Sea.

The "mother" fortress is to be named "Chi Ping I" and the three others "Chi Ping II," "Chi Ping III," and "Chi Ping IV."

Ho Does Not Want High Post

Nanking, May 22. General Ho Ying-chin's reluctance to accept the premiership today further delayed President Chiang Kai-shek's nomination of a new president for the Executive Yuan.

The Legislative Yuan continued its recess and will go into session again as soon as it receives the President's appointment of a new premier.

General Ho's close associates said today that he has declined from accepting the nomination because it is a difficult and thankless post and also because of the lack of an assurance that the new Executive Yuan will operate under the Premier's own responsibility with a minimum amount of interference from the Legislative Yuan.

President Chiang, faced with the difficulty of selecting a new premier, is reported to have held a lengthy conference today with Dr. Wang Chung-hui, former Foreign Minister, who returned to Nanking from Shanghai on a special summons this morning.

Mr. K. C. Wu, Mayor of Shanghai, also made a brief visit to the capital this morning in answer to an official summons. He returned to Shanghai at noon.

rumors were current here today that President Chiang may appoint Dr. Wang Chung-hui as President and Mr. K. C. Wu as Vice-President of the Executive Yuan.—Reuter.

PROPOSED ORDINANCE HAS BEARING ON WARTIME CIVIL COURTS

An Ordinance to extend the period during which legal proceedings may be instituted and rights may be exercised is to have its first reading in Legislative Council this week.

Objects and reasons of the Bill, entitled the Enforcement of Rights (Extension of Time) Ordinance, 1948, state:

It may be that certain courts set up by the Japanese may have conformed sufficiently to the standards required by International Law as to make it necessary to devolve them a proper forum of litigation for the class of cases there entreatable. Whether or not this may prove to be the case it should clearly not operate to bar the rights of even those claimants who could, if they chose, merely on the ground that their cause of action is stale and has become extinguished or barred by lapse of time.

The legal and equitable provisions which extinguish a right or bar a remedy are based on the principle that "the public have a great interest in having a known limit fixed by law to litigation, for the quiet of the community and that there may be a certain fixed period, after which the possessor may know that this title and right cannot be called in question" or the similar principle that the law will not assist those who are not vigilant in protecting their rights. The fact remains, however, that these provisions presuppose a normal state of society when the courts are always open to the litigant, the courts are the ordinary courts of the land and the litigant knows his remedies and is able to pursue them.

Necessary Conditions

Looking back on the history of the Colony since 1941, we find:

- (A) a period during which no civil courts were functioning;
- (B) a period during which Right" is by clause 2 of the Bill widely interpreted and under such interpretation when applied the Japanese set up some courts dealing with some civil matters (C) a period of Military Administration during which civil courts were suspended but it was possible e.g., to obtain a grant of probation to invoke the assistance of a Tenancy Tribunal;

(D) a period in which the ordinary courts were prepared to function but during which a moratorium was in force in relation to certain claims and during which some of the complications and confusion initiated by Japanese occupation and interference could be resolved.

It may, therefore, be said that the conditions necessary to the application of the principle stated in paragraph 2 would never be wholly present until the repeal of the Moratorium Proclamation. This Bill seeks accordingly to rectify the position by providing that in applying such principle no account shall be taken of the period between the 7th of December, 1941, to the commencement of this Ordinance. Certain debts were by article 9 of the Moratorium Proclamation expressly exempted from the operation of the Moratorium Proclamation. With the restoration of Civil Government there was nothing to prevent normal legal action being taken in respect of these debts. By way of exception, therefore, clause 4 of the Bill provides that in the case of those debts the period of which no action shall be taken in applying the principle aforesaid shall end with the 1st of May, 1948.

News In Brief

The Hong Kong Social Welfare Council's centre in Hospital Road will be formally opened on June 3 at 5.30 p.m. The official ceremony will be conducted by the Governor, Sir Alexander Grantham.

Arrested at 8.45 p.m. on May 21 by Det. 102 at Tai Kok Tsui, Yau Tong (28), who was banished for ten years on March 20 last, was yesterday sentenced to a year's hard labour and recommended for re-banishment.

Sub-Inspector J. S. Howorth revealed that accused had two previous convictions.

It may, therefore, be said that the conditions necessary to the application of the principle stated in paragraph 2 would never be wholly present until the repeal of the Moratorium Proclamation. This Bill seeks accordingly to rectify the position by providing that in applying such rights as a power of sale relating to a debt, to which the Moratorium Proclamation applied, could have been lawfully exercised. It is also disputable what would have been the effect of a "Japanese assignment" as interpreted by the Land Transaction (Enemy Occupation) Ordinance, 1948, if that Ordinance had not been enacted.

At the same time it is not desired to penalise a person who refrained from exercising a right while awaiting clarification by legislation of certain problems.

Clause 5 of the Bill accordingly seeks to adjust the various penalties by giving the court a discretion in applying equitable doctrines to take into account with certain exceptions the fact that a person was able during the Far East, with tourists arriving via Pan-American Airways Clippers from Honolulu, Guam, Manila, Okinawa, Tokyo, Shanghai and Hong Kong, to benefit from the new laws of the Republic of China.

The new fares will provide additional opportunities for many visitors to enjoy short holidays in Hong Kong, which is rapidly becoming the vacation land of the Far East, with tourists arriving via Pan-American Airways Clippers from Honolulu, Guam, Manila, Okinawa, Tokyo, Shanghai and other Far Eastern cities.

SCAP POLICY AGAIN CRITICISED

A strongly-worded manifesto protesting against what it terms the "dumping" of Japanese goods on world markets, has been issued by the South Sea Economic Association in Hong Kong.

The manifesto, issued on behalf of the Association, the Chinese Manufacturers' Union, the Hong Kong Cotton Weaving Manufacturers' Association and the Singapore Chinese Textile and Sundry Importers Union, refers to SCAP's policy on Japanese industries as "unfair competition personifying economic aggression."

It says this policy "not only threatens the closure of all local industries but the very existence of all Chinese."

The manifesto declares the似體 bodies' belief in restrictions on Japanese trading with the outside world and appeals to the Hong Kong Government to grant "material aid" to local industries to lower the cost of production.

Hong Kong labour costs, it says, are 14 times that of Japan,

GOVERNOR INSPECTS SCOUTS

Over 1,500 Boy Scouts and Girl Guides paraded at the Botanical Gardens yesterday for an inspection by the Governor, Sir Alexander Grantham.

The band of the Aberdeen Industrial School played the National Anthem on His Excellency's arrival, following which Cubs formed a circle round Sir Alexander, who is Hong Kong's Chief Scout, and gave the Cubs "Grand Howl."

His Excellency, addressing the parade, said the Scouts were the finest youth organisation in the world. Youths of all nationalities, races, creeds and religions were members.

Hong Kong Scouts: His Excellency said, had a very fine record and a good reputation and he congratulated them on their good work.

Three cheers were then given for Sir Alexander, and the Rally closed with the playing of the National Anthem.

JEWELLERY CONFISCATED

On the application of Revenue Officer Knox, Mr. W.A. Blair-Kerr yesterday ordered the confiscation of 125 pairs of gold-plated earrings and three packets of cultured pearls seized at Kai Tak Airfield on April 21, and valued at $1,200.

RO Knox said that the articles were found in the possession of Chen Fon, a passenger on a PAL plane for Manila, who had no export permit for them. Chen was allowed to leave when he promised to return for the articles later.

At its next meeting, on Tuesday, the Rotary Club of Hong Kong will hear Squadron Leader A.D. Panton, D.F.C., speak on "Intelligence Activities of Prisoners of War". The Meeting will take place in the Roof Garden of the Hong Kong Hotel at 12.30 p.m.

China's Policy On Jap Peace Treaty

Shanghai, May 22. The Sin Wan Pao, in a Nanking despatch today, quoted a "high-ranking Government official" as summarizing the Chinese policy regarding the Japanese peace treaty as follows:

1. The Chinese Government is steadfastly adhering to its original stand regarding a preliminary conference and hopes that other Governments will accept the Chinese compromise proposal—power participation with the Big Four retaining the veto power.

2. China believes that an effective Japanese peace treaty could only be established with Soviet participation.

3. China would rather wait until her "ideal circumstances" arrive than hasty enter into the conference.

4. China insists on half of the total of Japanese reparations and will oppose any move aimed at reducing Japanese reparations.

5. China has complete understanding of the principles of the American policy in Japan and does not consider the United States action as a programme to rearm Japan and to convert Japan into a bastion of American industry.

6. China believes that the question of retention or abolition of the Emperor system in Japan should be decided by the Japanese people themselves.

7. The Chinese Government hopes that the Chinese people will watch the problems calmly instead of emotionally. Until China has built up herself, "empty talk" will not help the situation.—United Press.

He told his constituents that a further cut in newsprint is totally incompatible with the repeated assertions by Government that they believe firmly in democracy for one of the fundamentals of a strong democracy is that public opinion should be well informed and that there should be a free exchange of ideas.

"Great Britain today is compared with pre-war in this country—is only 28 per cent—even Germany has 72 per cent, Italy 93 per cent and Russia 115 per cent—of their pre-war consumption."

"Government must think again on its total question for to treat newsprint as unimportant 'is to make a mockery of democracy,'" Byers said.—United Press.

BIGGER AIR FORCE BILL
Mr. Truman Signs With ReservationsExtra Money May Not Be Spent

Washington, May 21. President Truman today signed the US$3,198,100,000 plane-buying bill but served notice that he may not spend the US$822,000,000 added by Congress to start building a 70-group Air Force.

Mr. Truman issued a statement to make it clear that his signature did not mean he was abandoning his stand that a 66-group Air Force was sufficient at present.

He said, "Congress has seen fit to provide US$822,000,000 beyond the amount I consider necessary. A provision has been made (in the bill), however, that funds shall not be spent without a finding by the President that contracts let are necessary in national defense."

"Our security requires that the total national defence programme be based on a sound economic system and depend on the level of expenditures which can be supported in subsequent years. It is therefore my intention to carry out provisions of the present act with this in mind."

The Secretary of Defence (Mr. James Forrestal) has repeatedly warned Congress in hearings on the bill that any effort to expand the air force to 70 groups would require "balancing" the increase in other defence forces.

He said the overall programme would be too costly and would put too great a strain on the nation's economy.

To Be Reviewed

Mr. Truman backed Mr. Forrestal to the limit at the time and in today's statement, but he said he would "review the entire military programme" with Mr. Forrestal in December—presumably to determine whether the added air force expansion is justified.

Congressional supporters of larger air force insisted that 70 groups were the "minimum protection" the nation could afford in view of the tense international situation.

Opponents of the move charged that Congress was trying to "buy security" with dollars rather than approve a draft and universal military training in election year.

The House of Representatives approved the bill 343 to three and the Senate 74 to two.

Mostly Jets

Most of the money in the bill has been requested by President Truman. The bulk is an "advance" on the aircraft procurement budget for the fiscal year 1949, beginning July 1.

The House and Senate voted to appropriate not only what President Truman asked, but US$822,000,000 in addition.

The money was to be used to buy the first of 4,200 new planes, mostly jet-propelled.

The Air Force planned to place orders immediately for 2,277 planes for delivery within 18 months to two years.

The Navy is expected to buy about 1,500 for its air arm.

Exactly what effect President Truman's statement will have on plans is not yet known. It appeared, however, that both services would have to confine buying and ordering to the amount originally requested by the President and Mr. Forrestal at least until Mr. Truman has completed his autumn "review" of the programme.—United Press.

The order does not affect the peacetime operations of the Air National Guard.—United Press.

Rice Ration Increase

Singapore, May 21. The rice ration for Singapore and Malaya will be increased in the near future, the Singapore Free Press reported.

The increase would be the result of increased shipments from Siam and Burma, as well as the satisfactory stock position here. Although the International Emergency Food Committee's food allocations for the second half of the year have not yet been officially published, press reports here have said that 425,000 tons for the whole year has been approved for Malaya.

The basic ration is now two and two-thirds pounds a week for each person.—Herald.

Britain Still Has More To Put Into The Commonwealth Pool Than Any Of Its Other Members, Great As Their Resources Are, But We Must All Acquire

THE SENSE OF BELONGING TOGETHER

Says

LORD KEMSLEY

The announcement that a Commonwealth Conference is to be called as soon as possible to consider the grave international problems that face us is the best of news. Many of us have felt that much of the strength of the British Commonwealth, so wonderfully proved during the war, so firmly cemented by the sacrifices of its peoples, has since been dissipating in failure in practice to observe the lesson that power beyond the capacity of any member is inherent in the unity of the whole.

There is another general lesson from the example of the Commonwealth in its mutual affairs: the lesson that solutions to the most stubborn problems can often be found by a common-sense practical approach, when only bitterness and frustration can result from an approach in terms of prestige or pre-conceived attitudes or ideologies. Commonwealth unity itself is founded on an essentially practical basis: we have the sense of belonging together—the underlying condition of acting together—because we have the same long-term interests and because history has taught us that we can serve them best by keeping together.

We in Britain are fully aware of the difficulties which have stood in the way of closer Commonwealth unity in terms of political forms or institutions, and which have a special force for some of the Dominions, including the newer ones—internal divisions, regional interests, harsh immediate problems which like our own seem to demand priority, a right and natural instinct on the full exercise of national independence. But the more than these and other reasons diminish the formal political bonds of Commonwealth unity, the greater the importance of the unseen, informal bonds which gain their strength from the feelings of ordinary people in all the countries under the Crown. It is the spirit of our peoples which enables the politicians to seize the opportunities of Commonwealth solidarity through whatever means of consultation and agreed action may be available. The success of the Commonwealth Conference is assured if, and only if, the people insist that it should succeed.

Empire-Mindedness

The Commonwealth owes much to the leadership of its greatest statesmen—men like General Smuts, who of all men living can be counted the chief architect of the modern Commonwealth—of free and equal nations. But it owes just as much to the spirit of the ordinary man and woman—the spirit that inspires those wonderful food parcels from the Dominions and Colonies, the spirit of the thousands of British families who are eager to start a new life with its wider opportunities in the countries of the Commonwealth overseas, the spirit so vividly made manifest, and so happily stimulated, by the visits of the Royal Family upon whom it focuses in loyalty.

Empire-mindedness, as I may call this underlying sense of belonging together in the Commonwealth, is certainly a rising force in Britain. In days of greater prosperity and ease, we were perhaps too ready to take the Empire for granted. Today, in our time of testing and trouble, we are rediscovering both its values and its problems. One expression of this is the unprecedented demand after the war for the chance to set up in the Commonwealth overseas.

But we must beware of exaggerating the potentialities of migration, great though they are, as a means of strengthening the Commonwealth and overcoming our own difficulties, or we run the risk of entering into a new phase of disillusionment. For the next, say, five or ten years physical bottlenecks like the shortage of ships or the housing problem in the Dominions mean that only a very small fraction of the population could move from Britain. The problem of earning our imported food and materials and of dispersing our resources for purposes of defence, though marginally relieved, would remain little altered in general character.

What is needed, as well as a movement of men, is a movement of ideas. We need to stop thinking of the British Commonwealth as a collection of countries with different destinies, helping each other externally, so to speak, and to think of it as a unit, with functions and opportunities dovetailed into each other internally. We need to have that attitude towards the whole Commonwealth community which makes it seem as natural, though it may not always be, as practicable, to move from England to Canada, or from Australia to England, as to move between two places in the same country.

A Joint-Estate

That is the true spirit of belonging together—to think of England and South Africa and Nigeria and the rest, though having different national governments, as part of a joint estate, with opportunities shared and resources available to all—resources in materials, space, manpower and skill. We are, in short, a family with a common inheritance.

Thinking does not by itself accomplish much. But many people thinking together make a big force. The next task is to mobilise that force of opinion behind organisation and action for common purposes. To start with, if we in Britain enlarge our minds to the Commonwealth scale, we shall begin to take a quite different view of our own national destiny. As a small island off the coast of Europe, unable to feed itself and deprived of the world economic leadership which it had in the age of coal and steam, Britain's future may well appear less than its past. But as part of a Commonwealth with vast resources, of which its own population with their skill and their capital equipment are a vital element, it shares in the glorious prospects of the whole community of nations of which it was the founder and is still the chief. We still have more to put into the Commonwealth pool than any of its other members, great as their resources are.

Thinking that way, we shall find, throws a new light on old problems of our own. Housing, for example. Viewing the resources of the Empire as a whole in the field of housing, including both manpower and capital goods, we may well conclude that priority ought to be given to making houses in the Dominions rather than in Britain, apart from urgently needed special requirements. As Sir Ronald Weeks asked on this page last Sunday, why not a policy of New Towns in the Dominions instead of our overcrowded counties?

Thinking that way, we shall find, throws a new light on old problems of our own. Housing, for example. Viewing the resources of the Empire as a whole in the field of housing, including both manpower and capital goods, we may well conclude that priority ought to be given to making houses in the Dominions rather than in Britain, apart from urgently needed special requirements. As Sir Ronald Weeks asked on this page last Sunday, why not a policy of New Towns in the Dominions instead of our overcrowded counties?

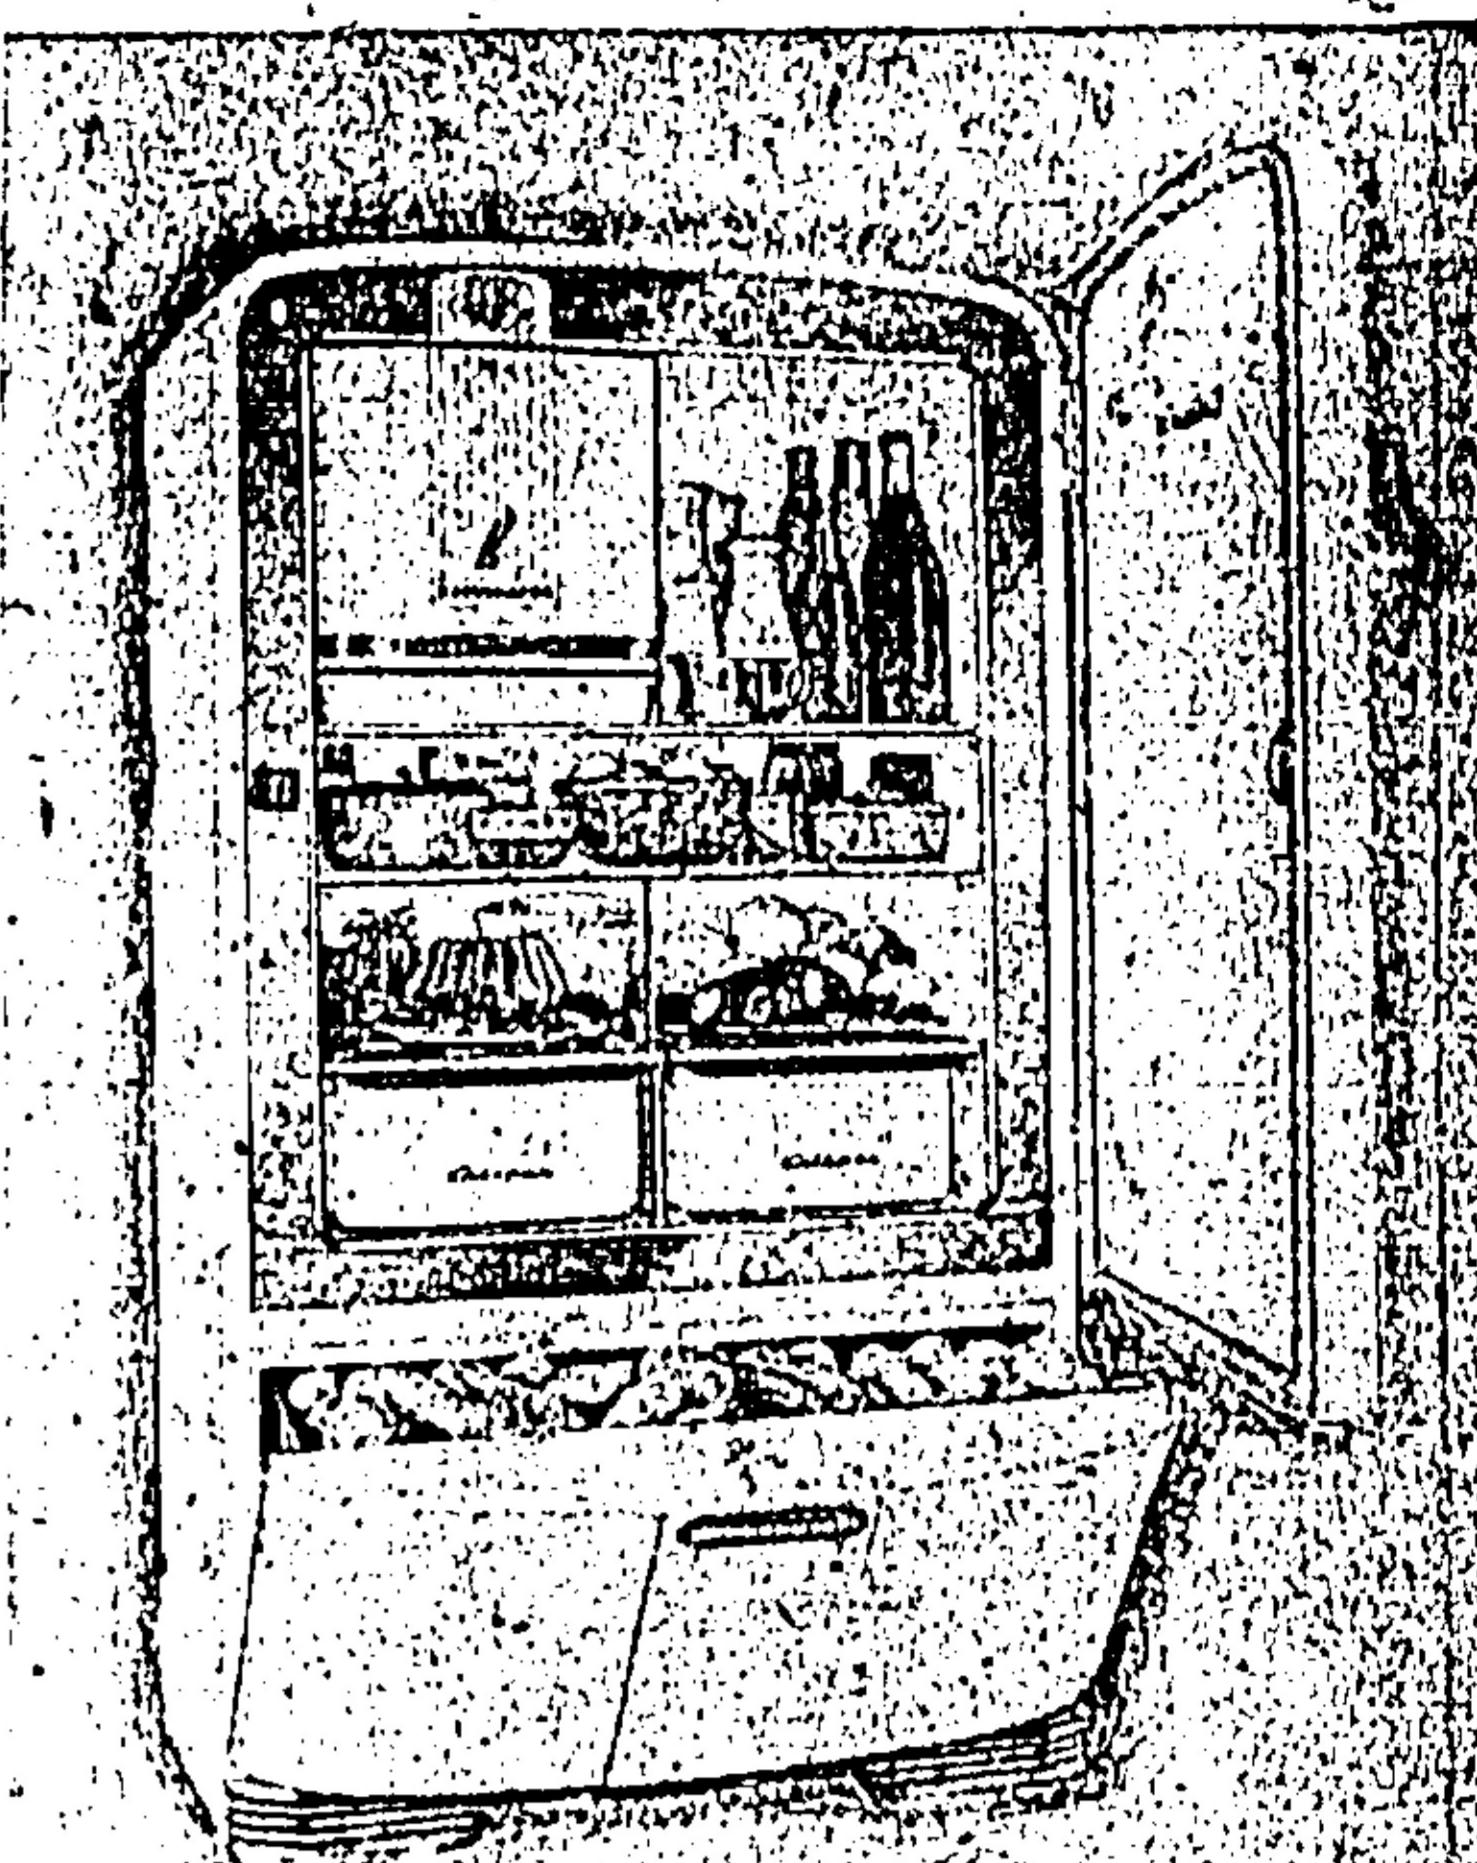

Or take food as another example. While we must clearly strive to grow the maximum in this country, we shall always have to import a large fraction of our needs. To the non-Empire-minded that is a great anxiety. To the Empire-minded it is a challenge to produce everything that we can in the Empire. We should be asking ourselves, for instance, whether it is better to spend the same money on ploughing up pasture in England or on restoring eroded soil in the Dominions and Colonies.

Faith In The Future

In foreign affairs, too, where more than ever before we need all the strength we can get, the enlargement of our thought to the Commonwealth scale bids us always strive for Commonwealth agreement before national policy is expressed to the United Nations or to foreign countries. That objective applies as much to the Dominions as to Britain, where their interests are primarily engaged. But the responsibility for leadership remains, generally speaking, with Britain, of the Commonwealth group; we should not expect of others that which we fail to insist upon ourselves. Witness, for example, Palestine—an issue of vital importance to the whole Empire, yet one on which it has been hopelessly divided. That is the way to dissipate our inheritance.

The call to refresh our Empire-mindedness, our sense of belonging together in the Commonwealth, is eminently a call to the youth of our nations, who have the most to gain from the future. But youthfulness is not the prerogative of the young, neither of young men and women nor of young nations. It is a call to all of us to renew our youth at the fountain of the Commonwealth's youthful strength and hope. It is a call to faith, faith in our future as a group of free nations. "Where there is no vision, the people perish." Faith in the future, based on our sense of belonging together, we who believe in freedom would fall easily prey to those who do boast a fanatical faith in a very different future of their own devising.

The Commonwealth Conference is capable of launching a new era of hope and achievement in our affair: it is equally capable of bequeathing nothing but pious phrases and minor official arrangements—the fictions and jargon of Commonwealth affairs. The first condition of its success is the spirit of the peoples represented; the second—in vision in high places; and the third is determination so to organise our common resources and act together for common purposes as to replace the weakness of the parts by the unbounded strength of the whole community.

CARDINAL SPELLMAN'S VISIT

On Wednesday next, His Eminence Cardinal Francis J. Spellman, Archbishop of New York since 1939, will arrive in Hong Kong for a three-day visit as the guest of Sir Alexander and Lady Grantham, Archbishop Spellman, who is on his way to the U.S.A. from Melbourne where he attended the recent centenary celebrations of Melbourne Diocese, will be accompanied by 13 representatives of the Catholic Church in America. The party are due to reach Canton on Tuesday afternoon when they will be the guests of the American Consul General in a reception at his residence. In the evening they will be the dinner guests of Dr. T. V. and Mrs. Soong. Cardinal Spellman and five members of his party will stay the night in Dr. Soong's guest house, while the remaining representatives will be housed either at the Ol' Kwan, or the Victory Hotel. They will leave for Hong Kong in a specially chartered Pan American plane due here on Wednesday afternoon. Cardinal Spellman and three of his accompanying Clergy will be accommodated in Government House, while the rest will stay at the Marynoll House or the Catholic Mission House. Their programme while in the Colony will include a conducted tour of the Island on Thursday morning, a reception at either the Hong Kong Hotel or the Catholic Centre Club in the afternoon and dinner at the Cathedral in the evening. They will leave for Manila sometime on Friday.

Cardinal Spellman, whose home is in Madison Avenue, New York, is also Bishop of the Catholics in the Army and Navy of the United States. He was born in Massachusetts in 1889 and was ordained in Rome at the age of 27, when he returned to America to work in a Massachusetts Parish for two years. He then joined the editorial staff of the "Boston Pilot," a religious weekly and four years later became assistant Chancellor Archdiocese of Boston. From 1925 to 1932 he was attached to the Secretary of State's office in the Vatican, returning to Boston in 1932 where he remained auxiliary bishop until his appointment as Archbishop of New York. He became a Cardinal in 1946. Known as the "Prince of the Roman Catholic Church," the Cardinals, as the advisers and assistants of the Sovereign Pontiff, or Pope, are the supreme council or senate of the Church. On the death of the Pontiff, they select his successor. There are three orders of Cardinals — Bishops, Priests and Deacons. These orders are distinct from those of the Hierarchy, with very few exceptions. The Cardinal Priests are archbishops or bishops, and the Cardinal Deacons are priests. There are at present 65 Cardinals and 5 vacancies in the Sacred College, as it is termed. When complete it consists of 70 members.

HONG KONG BUTTERFLY CATALOGUE

Dr. Alexander Steven Corbett, whose death in Kuala Lumpur was announced a few days ago, was probably the foremost expert in this part of the world on Far Eastern butterflies. He had made extensive collections in Malaya, Java, Sumatra and Borneo during the ten years that he was engaged as a soil chemist to the Rubber Research Institute at Kuala Lumpur. He was also the consultant to the Natural History Museum in London on this subject. It had always been Dr. Corbett's intention to visit Hong Kong for the purpose of studying butterflies but he never managed to do so. Dr. W. G. E. Eggleton, of the Hong Kong University undertook to make a collection for him when he first came to the Colony over 10 years ago, and on the basis of this collection Dr. Corbett published a new catalogue of Hong Kong butterflies. 11-YEAR-OLD FLIES TO CUBA. Eleven-years-old, Canton born Miss Josau Han Chao will step into a Pan American Airways plane at Kai Tak airport on Friday next, bound unaccompanied for Havana, Cuba, to meet the father she has never seen. Two years ago, Josau's mother left Hong Kong to join her husband, a Chinese grocery merchant who departed to Cuba just before his daughter's birth. Josau stayed behind in Hong Kong for four years in the home of her uncle.

vice recently, left Hong Kong on Friday by air for England. He was accompanied by his wife and daughter. Among the latest work which he had been interested in here was the compilation of a bulletin dealing with the food and flowers to be found in the Colony. This was published last month in the form of a general information booklet about vegetables, fruit trees, flowering shrubs and the giant African land snail, which Dr. Herklots says has caused immense damage to food crops and flowers in Asia and is now firmly established in Hong Kong. Dr. Herklots first arrived here 20 years ago as a reader of Biology at the H.K. University.

Mr. Joe Fromm, Far Eastern editor of the amalgamated American weekly magazine "U.S. News-World Report" arrived in Hong Kong recently from Tokyo. He intends to write an article about present day conditions in the Colony for his journal, which deals with domestic economy and world affairs. Mr. Fromm will remain another week in Hong Kong before making a trip to Manila. He expects to return here in the middle of next month and leave again shortly afterwards on a roundabout journey to America via Saigon, Singapore, Java, India, the Middle East and Europe.

Inspector F. Appleton of the Hong Kong Police radio branch and Mrs. Appleton, left Hong Kong by air on Friday by BOAC flying boat for England on long leave.

Mr. Alan Marshall, one of Australia's most popular novelists arrived in Hong Kong yesterday for a visit. While in the Colony he intends to collect material for a future fiction book.

Dr. H. M. Bannerjee, Indian Government Trade representative arrived in Hong Kong on Thursday on his way to Tokyo, where he will remain for three weeks negotiating the export of cotton, jute and chemicals from India to Japan. Dr. Bannerjee left Hong Kong yesterday morning.

Rome, May 21. The Italian Foreign Office advised the British, U.S., Russian and French Embassies it is impossible for Yugoslavia and Italy to agree on a border demarcation. Italy asked the Big Four to settle the differences. The note stressed "the unpleasant situation created by the continued border violations" by Yugoslav forces.—Associated Press.

On her half-way-round the world flight, Josau will be looked after by stewards and stewresses on board the aircraft, while the airline company's traffic personnel along the route to Cuba, will make arrangements for her food, accommodation and special care.

COLONEL SORIANO'S PARTY

Most of the Colony's leading business men and several Government officials including the Hon. D. M. MacDougall and the Hon. R. R. Todd, were present at the Grapico on Friday when Colonel Soriano gave a buffet luncheon party to mark the inauguration of the San Miguel Brewery Hong Kong Limited. The first brew of the new beer was a special attraction and it passed the test of the connoisseurs with flying colours. Originally planned was the traditional evening cocktail party, but urgent business required Colonel Soriano's presence in Manila and he flew down in his private plane on Friday afternoon. Mr. Krell, the brew-master, told me that the conversion of the H.K. Brewery to San Miguel represented the fifth big brewery that he has either started or re-organized. Three of them are in the United States and the fourth in the Philippines. He too has returned to the Philippines since the party, but his is to be only a short visit.

BRITISH AIR NEWS

For the first time in the history of British civil aviation, a scheduled flying boat service has now been opened by BOAC between the U.K. and Johannesburg—along a route that is probably the most fascinating in the world. Operated by the new 35 ton Short Solent aircraft, the largest British commercial flying boat so far used and capable of carrying 34 passengers, a twice-weekly service has been introduced which is shortly to be increased to three times a week in each direction.

On the later stages of the journey, flying boats will for the first time be making regular use of the Central African system of rivers and lakes, altogether some 2,000 miles. The Johannesburg Terminal of the route at Vandal Dam is on the Vaal River. Vandal Dam was constructed to store water for the domestic and industrial needs of Johannesburg and the Reef while recently a pipeline was laid from the Vaal River to Pretoria so that water from the Dam now supplies that city as well. Costing more than £1,000,000, the Dam was completed shortly before the war and released about 700,000,000 gallons of water a day.

TO JOIN PARENTS:

Martin Cruttwell, 6-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Cruttwell, travelled out by BOAC plane from England recently to join his parents here. Martin was born in Hong Kong but was evacuated to Australia in 1940. Consequently he is finding life in the Colony now, and is a strange little one of a fifth. Abdullah had recently — "in the British" — found his wisdom — which I do not profess entirely to understand — to leave Palestine to come. I and my parents will now follow him to Australia.

Lewis Has Hopes

Washington, May 22.
John L. Lewis today held out some hope for peace in the soft coal industry, but refused to arrange for his miners not to strike before or after June 30.

The Lewis issue of "peace or war" is up to Presidents Benjamin Fairless of the United States Steel Corporation, George Humphrey of the Min-Han Company and J. B. Francis of the Land Creek Coal Company.

Lewis, who broke off new wage negotiations on Wednesday told reporters today: "There is still time to convene a constructive wage conference and negotiate a contract by July 1 if they want to." He said the union "deplores the constant suggestion that the termination of a contract insures the stopping of mining."

But, in the next breath he added: "We are continually hopeful that wage negotiations in good faith would negotiate a successful contract and make unnecessary any suspension of mining." Lewis served notice that the paramount issue of the contract will be the "activation" of the miners' $30,000,000 welfare fund which touched off the recent soft coal strike.—United Press.

Professors Are "Distressed"

Beirut, May 21.

American professors at Beirut's American University described themselves as "distressed" today in a letter sent to the U.S. Minister in Lebanon, Lowell Pinkerton, regarding the United States policy in Palestine.

The letter said: "Our University for 82 years has been devoting the cause of education and the national development of goodwill in the Near East. The Americans enrolled in this area are personally concerned and distressed at the recent turn of policy by our Government regarding Palestine."

"This policy precipitated the recognition of the Zionist State of Israel. In our opinion the best United States interests in this area have been injured and the prestige and good faith enjoyed by this country as a champion of peace, mutual respect and justice have been greatly jeopardised.

"Reports have been received that our Government is considering lifting the embargo on shipments of arms.

"This would only prolong the bloodshed and conflict and render difficult agreement and conciliation which can form the only basis of lasting peace. We urge our Government's policy be reviewed in the light of the principles of justice and the international reputation of our nation."—Associated Press.

FRANCE PREPARING TO RECOGNISE GEN. XUAN DOMINION STATUS ONLY SNAG

Paris, May 21.

France is likely to recognise the new Indo-Chinese Central Government of General Nguyen Van Xuan, but no statement will be made until official notification of its formation is received, usually well-informed quarters here stated today.

Government circles welcomed the election of the Francophile general as President as an important step towards the final settlement of France's future constitutional relationship with Indo-China.

As far as recognition is concerned, the attitude taken by the French Government and the High Commissioner for Indo-China, M. Emile Bollaert, since M. Bollaert's speech of Sept. 9 last, has been that the formation of a Central Government, including all the "three kya"—Tonkin, Annam and Cochinchina—is an internal matter to be settled by the Indo-Chinese themselves.

New talks between M. Bollaert and General Xuan are reported.

The obstacles to a final settlement of Franco-Indochinese relations will, however, still have to be overcome in the course of the expected Bollaert-Xuan talks.

Dominion Status

Although France has virtually withdrawn her objections to the unity of the "three kya," there are other points in the claims of the Indo-Chinese Nationalists on which the French Metropolitan Government may find it more difficult to give way.

Unofficial reports received in Paris say, for example, that General Xuan wants his Government to become a dominion which would have an important treaty of alliance with France.

The independent left wing

Combat said that no final solution could be found while the Republican President, Dr. Ho Chi Minh, and his Vietminh Party were excluded.

Saying the solution could not end the "dirty war", Combat asked: "Is it really, therefore, in the interests of France?"—Reuter.

PATRICK CAMPBELL'S PIECE

"Well," I said, "I really must go. It's getting late."

It was, as a matter of fact, rather early; but by the look of the side-table the evening would conclude with tea and jelly.

There was a mild outcry, headed by Spuddock. (I think the name was Spuddock, an awful man with beer-bottle glasses.)

"Whither away?" cried Spuddock. "The tempus haec ruit fugit all that much, has it?"

"I have fugited," I said, "in your unusual phrase, quite enough for me."

I stood up.

He had been calling me "Lord Pugh" most of the evening. It seemed to be a private joke with the others.

"I shall just be able to stagger to the door myself," I told him. But Spuddock had gone.

"Thank you very much," I said. "I'd a lovely time."

"Do come again," said Marble. "We'll have some drink next time."

"Oh, but, please," I said, "honestly, it's all the same to me. I love tea."

Spuddock came back. He looked anxious.

"I say, old man," he said, "you're worse than the absent-minded professor with his arms through the legs of his trousers."

"Worse?" I said. "In what particular way?"

"You haven't got a coat," said Spuddock. "You're going bamy."

He crossed his eyes, stuck out his tongue, and wagged his fingers before his face.

Marble burst out laughing.

Mrs. Marble checked herself.

"Oh, stop it, Fred," she said.

"Don't be so rude. Go and help Mr. Campbell to find his coat."

"I don't require any help to find my coat," I said coldly. "It's on the hat-stand."

"That's what you think," said

Spuddock. He turned to the others.

"Lord Pugh's brain has collapsed," he said. "He's worrying about super-tax."

"I don't pay super-tax," I said. Spuddock put his finger to his lips. "Hush," he breathed—"walls have ears."

"Well," I said, "they must be pretty sore listening to you."

There was complete silence. It wasn't one of my best.

"Steady on, old chap," said Fred. "Spud was only joking."

"Broken-hearted clown," said Spuddock. He pretended to cry.

"I'm sorry," I said. "I thought we were all playing fourth form."

I went out into the hall. My coat was not there. I looked behind several other coats, but mine had gone. I came back into the room. Spuddock was whispering to the ferret-faced boy in the corner.

"It's gone," I said. Someone must have taken it. I left it on the hat-stand."

"Robbery with violence," said Spuddock.

"Can I have my coat, please?" I said carefully. "I've got a rather urgent appointment."

"Your coat?" said Spuddock, wide-eyed. "We haven't got your coat."

"Then here confirmed my suspicions. "Have we, Stan?" he said to the ferret-faced boy.

"Come along," I said. "We've all had a good laugh—a splendid laugh. Now hand it over. I've got to go."

"You know," said Spuddock, "this is a serious matter. Accusing people of taking your hat—"

"Cout," I said.

"Make up your mind," said the ferret-faced boy.

I turned to him politely. "Your sole contribution to this evening's conversation has been the comment, 'Crikey!'" I told him. "Keep it at that, and you'll be on safe ground."

"Listen to his ribs," said the ferret-faced boy. He turned to me. "I'm as good as you are,"

"Whither away?" These are catchphrases he said aggressively, "even if you are wearing a spiv's suit."

Mrs. Marble intervened. "Now boys," she said, "give Mr. Campbell his coat. I'm sure I don't know what he must be thinking of us."

"I'll give you one guess," I told her.

"Steady on a minute," said Marble. "May has nothing to do with this." He was always saying, "Steady on minute," and it drove me mad.

"Steady on what?" I shouted.

"Do we have to matter like monkeys all the time?"

"Temper," said Spuddock.

"Look out for Carnera."

I caught him by the tie, surprising myself.

"Give me my coat," I said, "or I'll send for a policeman."

I really thought I was going to hit him.

Spuddock showed alarm. "Don't strike me," he begged. He threw up his hands. "Not with a child in my arms."

I let him go. "I refuse to play this infantile game any longer," I said.

"Has baby-waby lost its tempy-wempy?" said Spuddock.

"Oh, shut up," I said—"you silly ass. You may keep my coat."

I told the Marbles. "You're welcome to it. A present from the management."

I got as far as the door when Spuddock said: "Here, here, in the bathroom. Can't you take a joke?"

"I am never amused," I said, "by theft." I left the room.

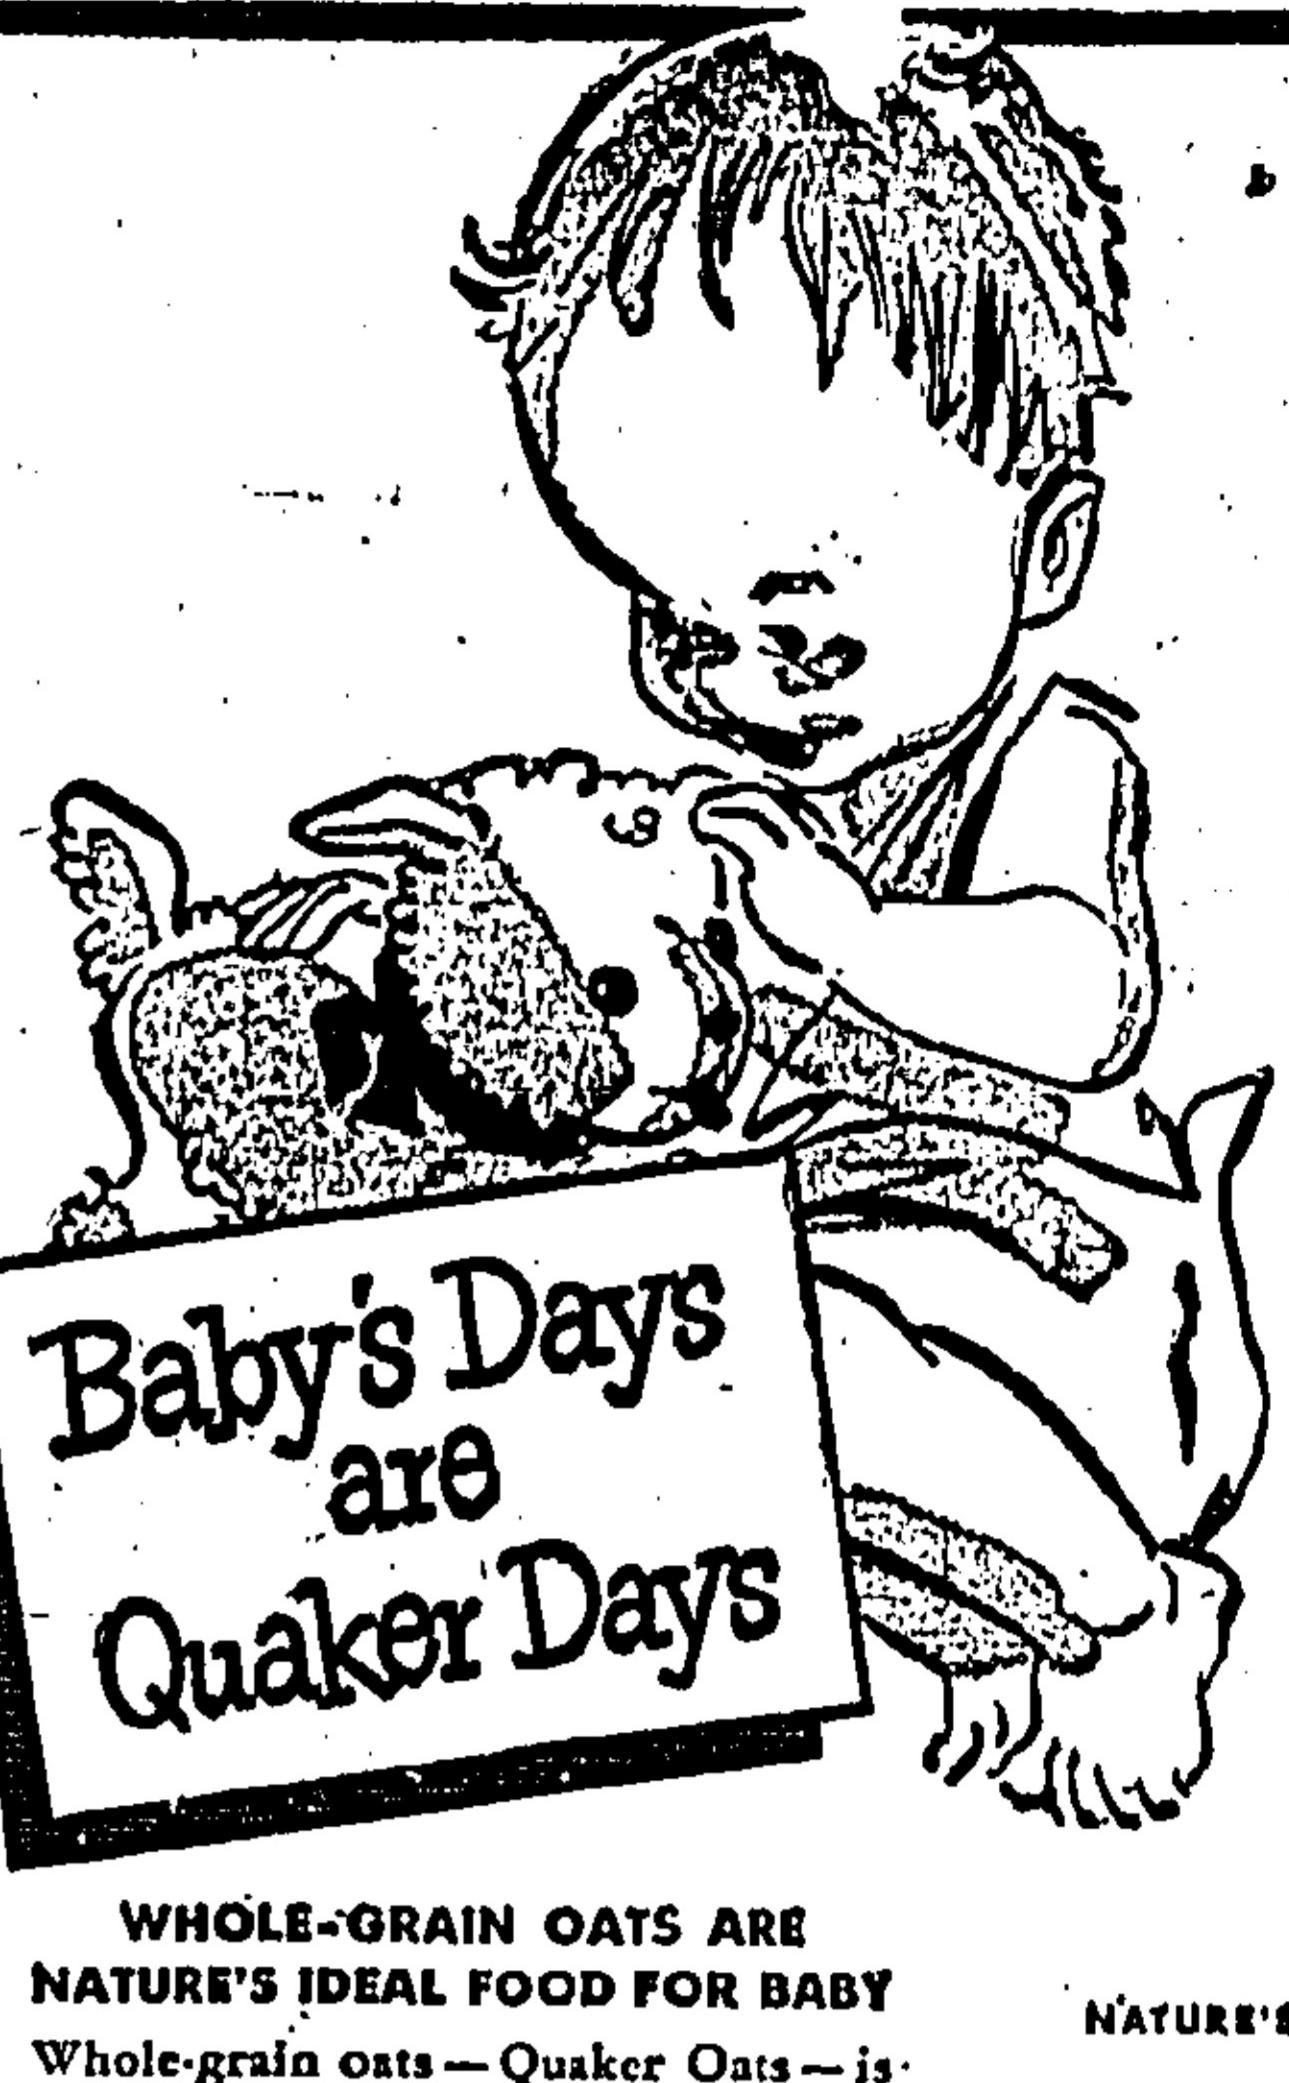

I couldn't find my coat in the bathroom. I came downstairs with my fingers hooked.

"Your carriage awaits, Lord Pugh," said Spuddock. My coat was over his arm.

I had the pleasure of standing on his foot as I snatched it away.

HE'S 'C. R.' TO 400 MILLION

Motoring up the ravine-sided mountain road from Amballa to Simla, the lean, shaven-headed man at my side—on his way to meet the British Cabinet Mission—said: "You know, but for my name, my name would be well known."

The man with the name that worried him has just been appointed Governor-General of India, Chakravarti Rajagopalachari is the name.

"I seldom get into your newspaper headlines," he said—and I suspected he was not wholly joking—"because the name is awkward to fit in."

To make it easier, he once instructed Indian reporters to break it into three words—Raja Gopal Achari. To his intimate he is "Rajaji"; but to millions of Indians he is "C.R."

He likes the contraction. "But it doesn't make my name known. I think half the people who refer to me as 'C.R.' don't know what it stands for."

Sixty-nine, a high-caste Brahmin, violent prohibitionist, fluent orator and prolific writer, "C.R."

—VICTOR LEWIS.

is stooped and frail-looking. But his intellect is razor-sharp, his humour Pukish, his conversation a parade of parables and similes.

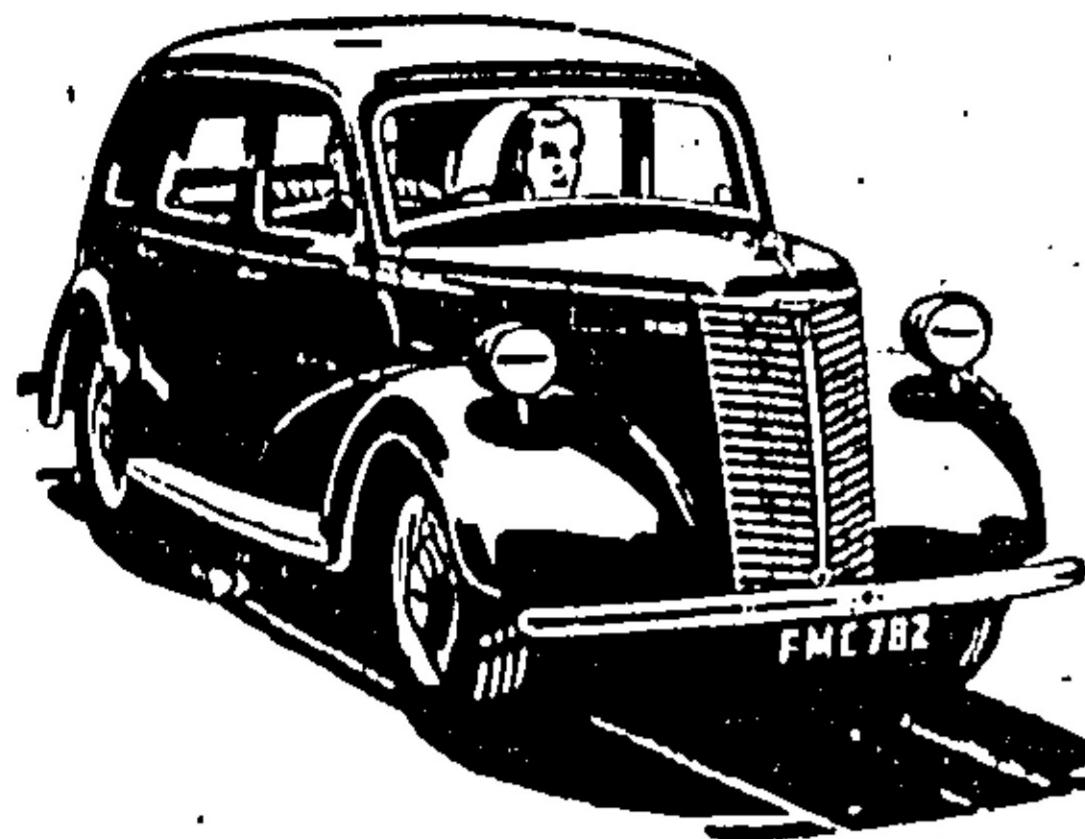

He has both the knack for getting things done—as he wants them done—and the age to carry weight in the land which so venerates age.

Generally he wants things done the Gandhian way of love and religious tolerance—even if an occasional loving box on the ear may be called for. Officially he will be subordinate to his Cabinet.

But if I know "C.R." then if he wants something done a certain way, there will be a series of coincidences, and it will be done—his way.

"C.R." was a great friend of Gandhi. The tie was stronger. His daughter Lakshmi married the Mahatma's youngest son. He gets on well with Jinnah, Governor-General of Pakistan. With all his official duties, he has still found time to write lengthy explanations of Socrates, Marcus Aurelius and Gandhi.

JAVA DEADLOCK BROKEN Talks With Indonesians To Resume U.N. Committee's Intervention

British Communist Demands

London, May 21. The British Communist Party tonight urged the British people to end their Government's "criminal policy which is responsible for fomenting war in Palestine."

It declared that the war was a direct consequence of the British and United States "imperialist policy."

The statement made five demands:

1.—Immediate recognition of the State of Israel by Britain.

2.—Ceasing of all British supplies of arms and subsidies to the Arab States.

3.—The speeding up of complete British military withdrawal.

4.—Britain's full support of United Nations Security Council measures to bring about the immediate suspension of hostilities.

5.—Britain's full support of the United Nations decision to establish and recognise sovereign and independent Jewish and Arab States in Palestine.

The heaviest responsibility for the war rested with the Labour Government "which had armed, equipped, subsidised and officered the armies of the reactionary princes and puppets of the Arab States"—Reuter.

Britain Blamed

London, May 21. Izvestia, the special Soviet Government newspaper, blamed Britain today for "sponsoring" the war in Palestine.

In an article accusing Britain also of disrupting the United Nations by opposing the Russian-backed American proposal for ending the Holy Land fighting, Izvestia said:

"British ruling circles have used all their influence in the Arab League to organise military operations in Palestine."

The article was broadcast by Moscow radio and recorded in London by the Soviet monitor—Associated Press.

The United Nations Security Council good offices committee today broke the deadlock in the negotiations for a political settlement between the Dutch and the Indonesian Republicans. The talks, which ended yesterday without agreement, will now be resumed on Wednesday.

The good offices committee announced tonight that its new plan was an "oral note" addressed to both parties to the dispute after a meeting of the Political Committee.

The Republicans had agreed to accept the informal "oral note" as a basis for resumed negotiations only if the Dutch would not accept formal proposals.

Dutch delegates said they thought it best to sound out both parties informally first, and it was then agreed to invite the good offices committee to put up proposals to settle the vexed plebiscite question in the form of an "oral note."

Policy Snag

When the talks broke down yesterday, there was disagreement on all major issues. The principle two are the proposed plebiscite in the disputed areas—for which the new "oral note" suggests a formula—and the question of a Netherlands-Indonesian Union.

The four main committees have been making progress in the negotiations for the past two months, but difficulties on major policy questions have hindered agreement in detail.

Before a United States of Indonesia can come into being, agreement has to be reached on the extent of Republican participation in the Provisional Federal Government.

Military observers say the cease fire ordered in January has been generally well observed, although today the Dutch Army announced that it had killed and captured "dozens of Indonesian bandits" in one district of West Java.

Congress Banned

The Indonesian Provisional Federal Government today banned a Republican Congress planned for Monday to discuss outstanding difficulties. The Republicans said it had been called to counter the Dutch and non-Republican Convention opening in Bandung on Thursday.

Two Dutch Ministers, Mr. P. Lieftinck (Finance) and Mr. L. Goetzen (without portfolio) arrived here today for talks on Dutch aid for Indonesian rehabilitation.—Reuter.

GRADY'S NEW POST

Washington, May 21. President Truman has nominated Mr. Henry Grady, American Ambassador to India, to be new Ambassador to Greece, it was announced at the White House today.—Reuter.

Government For Western Zone Of Germany Agreed

London, May 21. A formal communique announcing agreement on creation of a provisional government for Western Germany awaits only completion of technical details and is expected to be made early next week.

That is a report from responsible diplomatic sources at the conference of Great Britain, the United States, France and the Benelux countries.

It was reported that a tentative decision had been reached by the six countries to call a constituent Assembly about Sept. 1. The Assembly would be granted broad powers to draft a constitution for Western Germany.

The occupying powers—the US, Britain and France—would retain chiefly a veto authority over affairs concerning export trade currency and foreign policy.

British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin yesterday told the country's ruling Labour Party at its annual conference that the three major Western powers now are working out a system for German currency reform.

He said this was considered essential to putting the area back on its feet economically.

The Benelux countries which participated in the discussions on Germany are Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.—Associated Press.

No Communique

London, May 21. The plenary session of the six-power Conference on Germany broke up today without issuing its communique, which had been expected to comment on the crucial problems of international control of the Ruhr and formation of a Constituent Assembly for Germany.

The cutting off today's plenary session had been interpreted as suggesting some basic agreement had been reached on these problems. No communique is now expected until after the week-end. The delegates will continue their work in committee tomorrow.

It was thought tonight that the delay was caused by the difficulties in drafting an agreed wording for a communique on such controversial subjects.—Reuter.

Women Fight Fire

Denham, May 22. Two hundred women and girls, many in their night clothes, help to fight a fire which broke out early today at a hutted camp owned by Wimpey's Builders at Denham, Buckinghamshire.

The women, wives and daughters of employees, used buckets of water and fire extinguishers to fight the flames until the arrival of the fire brigade from five towns which got the blaze under control in about two hours.

Two hundred and fifty families carried their children to safety and removed furniture and bedding from the huts until the danger was over.

The canteen, billiards room and storeroom of the camp were badly damaged.

The flames could be seen for several miles. No one was injured.—Reuter.

QUINTUPLETS GO TO SCHOOL

Ontario, May 21. The Dionne quintuplets, who will be 14 weeks from today, are thinking more about high school entrance exams than birthday parties.

Annette, Cecile, Emile, Marie and Yvonne expect to be in high school this autumn and they want to be sure to make good marks in the final test in June. But there will be two birthday parties—a quiet dinner at home with their parents and a small party at the Villa Notre Dame convent where the guests will be nine girls who have been their fellow students all year.

What birthday presents the quintuplets will get is still a top secret. Papa Dionne shrugs his shoulders and smiles. His daughters have almost everything they want now. The quintuplets are growing up. They are slimmer than last year.—United Press.

Dramatic Leap

St. Albans, May 21. A goods train was proceeding from Hatfield to St. Albans today when the driver noticed that the points were wrong.

He shouted to the fireman to jump. Both jumped clear as the engined crashed through a buffer stop at the end of the siding, and then through an iron fence, coming to rest derailed across a public footpath.—Reuter.

Protest Against Lebanon Action

Athens, May 21. Greek guerrilla forces have occupied the town of Paramithi, in Epirus.

Although the guerrilla forces involved were small, military headquarters in Athens consider the move very important strategically. It was made in an attempt to cut the Ioannina-Preveza highway to the sea.

The Greek General Staff communicate today said the guerrillas were killed or taken prison during a sweep in the Tasikmalaya district of West Java, a Dutch Army communiqué reported today.

Stiff Fighting

Batavia, May 21. Duzens of "Indonesian bandits" were killed or taken prisoner during a sweep in the local garrison had withdrawn. Army reinforcements were sent to pursue the guerrillas.

Two previous guerrilla attempts to seize towns were regarded as moves towards the setting up of a capital for the "Free Greek Government," proclaimed last year by General Markos, the guerrilla leader.

Simultaneous drives on Konitsa, near the Albanian frontier, and Philita, 40 miles to the south-west, by the guerrillas were unsuccessful, and at Konitsa the guerrillas suffered heavy losses.

Military observers considered the new move as intended to cut the highway north to Yanina and south to Preveza—a port on one of the two peninsulas walling in the Gulf of Arta from the Ionian Sea.—Reuter.

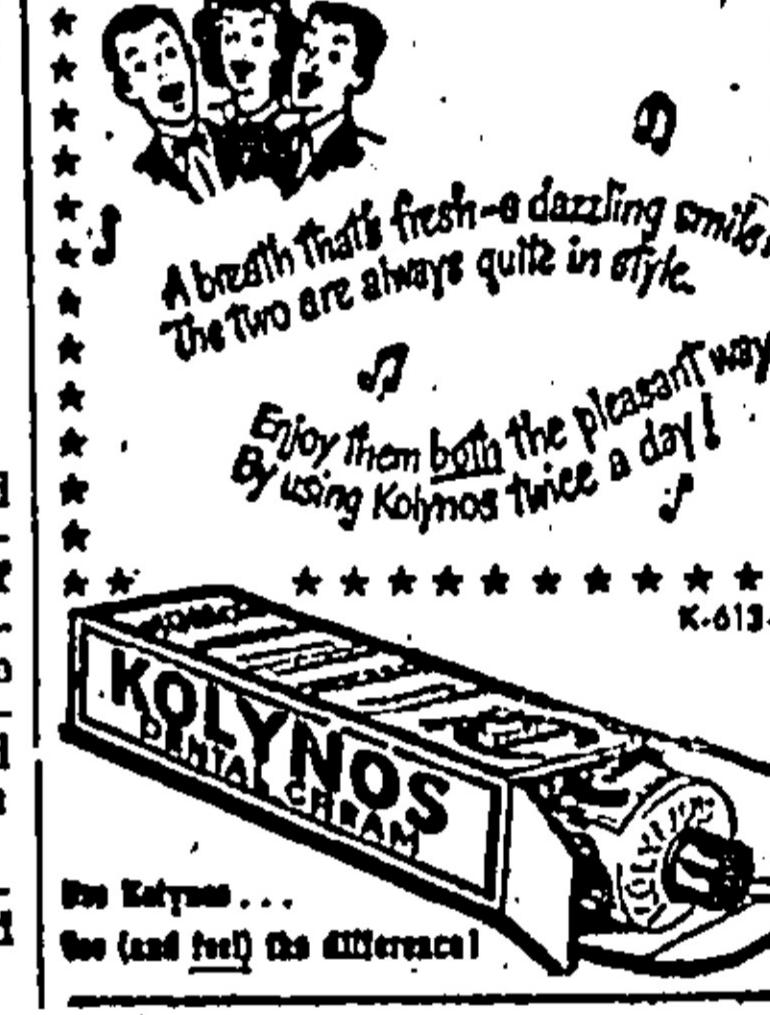

U.N. DISCUSSES CZECH CASE

Lake Success, May 21. The Security Council argued for two hours today in an attempt to avoid a Russian veto of a proposal to set up a Commission to hear evidence in the Czechoslovak case. Finally it adjourned without a decision and may take up the case again on Monday.

The Council will meet on Saturday on Palestine.—Associated Press.

Here Is The Last Air-Mail Despatch Of RICHARD WYNDHAM, Who Was Killed By Jewish Machine-gun Fire On Wednesday When Following Up The Attack Of The Arab Legion In The Shiek Jarrah District of Jerusalem. He Discusses

THE WARRIORS OF ISRAEL

Haganah is growing up. Eager young Jews and Jewesses, going straight from High School at 17 into the "partition war" are saying "We are off to join the army."

"The Army"—not Haganah—any more.

For the last 50 years the highly romanticised and popular defence force of the Jewish community in Palestine, originating from the associations of mounted watchmen which guarded Jewish farms far back as the days of Ottoman rule, Haganah is now rapidly developing into the world's newest army.

It is a people's army, and its potential strength in every Jew and Jewess in this Holy Land between the ages of 17 and 35. Perhaps half the Jewish population of 600,000. Not all these men and women will be accepted, of course. As in Britain in the early 1940's there just aren't enough weapons and equipment to go round—yet. Even so, the 25-35 group is now being called up.

Young Man's Army

But after "medicals" in requisitioned school buildings the number of blue cards issued for "part-time service" and in greys and whites for exemption for various reasons now nearly equal the number of red and green cards summoning "intakes" to full-time paid military service.

Essentially this is a young man's army. At 17, the Palestinian Jew can be—and mostly is if the second or third generation a Palestinian—fully developed, tall, brown and strong. More like a sun-forced South African farmer's son than a London Jew of the same age.

The girls come from the same mould.

And among nearly 500,000 Jews—which the Jewish Agency's immigration experts say will pour to Palestine from Europe's D.P. camps and stricken capitals as far as ships can be found after the British mandate is surrendered on May 15—thousands of bitter-fighting-mad youngsters will be found for reinforcements.

Sensibly, as becomes a comparatively small community, Palestine Jewry is cutting its military cloth to fit tightly.

Nice Balance

Full use is being made of men and women of all ages and terms of service are sufficiently varied to hit a nice balance between the demands of the army and those of industry, commerce, social services and agriculture.

The "crack" force of the new Jewish army is the Palmach, a commando-style shock force, already sporting blue berets with similar dagger-emblem badges—our special service troops of World War 2. Its men and women are young and know the country. Its full strength and fighting power will not be fully known until after we leave—and its field action is then unrestricted.

Palestine Jewry has in its ranks plenty of suitable candidates for this work. Young Jews and Jewesses, multi-lingual and fanatically eager to get at the hated Nazis, served with the British Army "Cloak and Dagger" units in the Middle East, parachuted into Axis-held territory with radios sets and explosive. Many did not come back—but there are enough experienced survivors to provide the Palmach with backbone and nerve.

British Model

The basic formation is the Hish—made up of field units organised on the British Army model of section, platoon, company and battalion, with equivalent ranks. Most of the 17-25 class are now on full-time service in Hish and Pictured is a general view of the wreckage in the captured sector taken from the Arabs by Jewish forces after fierce fighting. British intervention finally brought a cease fire.

Mansfield quarter of Jaffa. The British intervention finally brought a cease fire.

Officers and nco's are predominantly men and women who have served under British command. Even weapons are British and tactics too come straight out of our textbooks.

The Hish is the Home Guard of the older men and women and their service is part time. Like their British forerunners their role is static local defence. They guard farms, settlements, factories and suburbs in which they live and work.

The Palmach, younger men and women with jobs, studies or family responsibilities which keep them out of higher grade units is intended to provide local mobility support for Hish. This unit is also part time only.

Middle-aged men and women unfit for active service have an opportunity to answer the national service call in the ranks of Mishmar Ha'om, where part-time voluntary duties get their names on road block defence and "A.R.P." rosters.

Well-Kept Secret

Haganah's actual fighting strength now is a well-kept secret. The Jewish Press and leaders are maintaining a strict self-censorship. Women work—and fight if necessary—alongside men. Equal pay for equal work is the rule.

Contrary to popular belief women are kept out of the firing line as much as possible, although almost without exception they are able to use Sten guns, rifles and pistols in an emergency. But they largely constitute the Jewish "Royal Corps of Signals" and fill ambulance, cooking and administrative establishments which are classified "men only" in the British Army.

Pay is low. A Jewish "private" gets only £2 a month—but of course he is fed rations (including a generous cigarette supply) and billets. Democratically, but not necessarily productive of incentive to get promotion or to inspire conscientiousness, family allowances are small for all ranks.

I don't know the names of the commanders or the chief staff officers. Probably only a handful of Jews would recognize the commander-in-chief if they saw him in the street. The Jews prefer it this way but they are wrong.

The Montgomery legend shows that the people behind a people's army like to know, and have the right to know, the names of the men leading their sons and daughters into action. As it is, disinterested observers and thousands of Jews share a suspicion that many of the new army's birth pangs are due to amateur "committee-style" leadership.

Many Complaints

There are many complaints of the training period in camps in the coastal plains around Tel Aviv too. There have been cases of youngsters killed in action only two weeks after being called up.

I could provide a long list of tactical and strategical errors.

Two examples only: convoy speed has been sacrificed to extra armament which slowed down trucks to two or three miles an hour on gradients, and made them easy targets for accurate machine gun fire through visors; the policy of keeping isolated non-productive settlements fully defended for political reasons is depriving thousands of Hashshah's best young men and women of collective training on brigade level which is essential to any modern army.

But this Jewish army is not the first army in history to make mistakes early in the campaign. It will learn.

At present it is obvious the Jews are short of trained officers and nco's and what in the British army are known as support weapons—armored, mortars, smoke projectors, etc., and the rest. The Jews say "We will get all we want after you British go, anyway, why should we show you all we have while the slightest chance remains of you staying on and confiscating our equipment?"

Mortar Groups

The most obvious shortage is artillery, which the Arabs are already using. The Jews' answer to Faiz Kawakil's handful of elderly ex-Syrian 75's will probably be mortar groups, fast and packing a punch, tight concentrations of trucks holding four or five 3-inch mortars each, with accompanying radio vans and ammunition carriers.

How good are the Jews likely to turn out as soldiers—fighting their own war?

These are early days—in which to judge them in relation to the present struggle still 75 per cent political. But there is a recent record of Jewish military ability.

Ask any British soldier with an 8 on his African Star what he thinks about Jewish sappers, port engineers and drivers he met in the Western Desert and it's level money he will speak highly of his old comrades—even over the intervening tragic years of Anglo-Jewish antagonism.

At the outbreak of the Second World War, 140,000 Jewish men and women in the Holy Land registered for war service. A thousand found their way into the East African Desert and the Greek campaigns. In all about 1,500,000 Jews served with the Allies on all fronts.

First-Rate

Thousands of Jews as civilian workers of all ages gained first-hand knowledge of British weapons, equipment and organization in ordnance workshops and depots. In the Jewish Brigade of the British Army, formed in September 1944, 30,000 Palestinian Infantrymen, sappers, gunners, signallers and drivers, served under Jewish officers and under the Jewish flag.

After they fought the "crack" German 4th Parachute Division along the banks of the Senio river in the closing days of the Italian campaign General Sir Harold Alexander (now Field Marshal Viscount Alexander), signalled:

"Jewish soldiers are first-rate fighters." And "Alex's" judgment is more important—much more important than mine.

Metaphorically, he put the scarred face and burned finger-tips of gunman Dillinger under the microscope to draw the conclusion that the plastic surgeon's knife can produce no more than a 10 per cent. disguise.

The Search For Motives

By contrast, Louwago, of Brussels, prefers the psychological approach to crime. He probes motives, quotes Freud, thinks a policeman may discover vital clues by remembering "the coquetry of callipsoles, women, the pugnaciousness of virgins, the zoophily of obnoxious persons, the taste for scandal, the curiously regarding the intimate life of other persons."

Ducloux himself has been not just an administrator, but a policeman on the beat. It was an exciting beat and covered the sunny southern coast of France from the docks of Marseilles and the "smugglers' terrain" around Toulon to the villas near Cannes of the rich "international set."

CLEANING UP THE MESS

Legislation designed to iron out legal complications arising from the Japanese occupation of the Colony, and from war consequences generally, continues to multiply. With the two additional measures now proposed, however, there will be little quarrel. One contrives, on a commonsense level, to provide a formula for the settlement of disputes relating to contracts which were not fulfilled for reasons outside the contractor's control. The other, equally sensibly, overrides the common-law statute of limitations, and treats as a period outside of statutory time that which clared between December 7, 1941, and the commencement of the new Ordinance. For the purpose of establishing a claim, or the enforcement or exercise of any right, nearly seven years will be regarded as a legal blank. Both measures will appear as sound in equity. Conceivably, under the existing law, action for damages might still lie against one of the parties for non-fulfilment of a contract, despite the presence of the element of force majeure, although it might be doubtful whether the Court would entertain it. The new Ordinance clears up the point entirely. It not only supplies the means of adjustment of accounts on this level, but also authorises the collection of expenses incurred for the purpose of the performance of the contract, no matter that it was never in fact discharged. Likewise with the Enforcement of Rights (Extension of Time) Ordinance. Manifestly it would be unjust to prevent a person from claiming otherwise legal remedy on the ground that the claim was statute-barred, when he may have spent most of the intervening interval interned by the Japanese, when the declaration of the moratorium presented serious obstacles to assertion of a right, and when lengthy periods occurred during which no civil court functioned.

It will not fail to be noted, however, that there is a direct link between this latter Ordinance and the lifting of the Moratorium and that there is, as yet, no official indication whether it is intended to proceed with the Debtor and Creditor Ordinance as drafted, or to drop it altogether. Agitation against its passage remains vigorous in certain Chinese quarters, without acquiring any strength of public opinion in support, and without offering constructive suggestions regarding satisfactory alternative. The strict legal position is extensively analysed in the current issue of the "Far East Economic Review," and pernicious of no misunderstanding that submission to the pressure against enactment might easily result in the opponents of the bill finding their second state worse than their first. It seems clear on all the authorities that payment to a conquering power cannot extinguish the claims of the original creditor, and that they have no validity whatsoever. The Creditor and Debtor Ordinance attempts to achieve a settlement which skirts wide of this doctrine and makes generous concessions at the expense of the creditors. The main purpose is to bring about a compromise arrangement, lacking guarantees of satisfaction to go on with the Bill as framed, or abandon it altogether and let the general principles of composition, and the listing law operate.

They look on him as a neighbour, as a benevolent squire who can discuss the crop prospects with them and might even lend a hand building pigsties or repairing a barn.

THE PROMS

Of few men—be they artists, musicians—can more have been written than of Ludwig van Beethoven. Whether or not this in itself is a test of fame, I hesitate to say; it is certain, however, that when the subject of music is being discussed, Beethoven's name will be mentioned in the first minute. It would be interesting to examine the reason for this. It cannot be attributed merely to an association of ideas. The root-cause lies much deeper than in the capricious moods of a person's thoughts and mind.

I think the real reason must be sought in psychological channels. From the earliest days of a child's understanding up to the time of his or her maturity, Beethoven is quoted as the musician who towers above all others. Of mighty stature in ability and artistry, he grew yet mightier still with the passing of the years, until his name and music became synonymous in the mind. Such is the test of true fame, and by all standards, Beethoven does not fail in that test.

In him, there seemed to burn a "celestial fire" which was forever seeking newer grounds for outlet, new ways of expression, new means of disseminating the ideas born within him. For the future wealth of his successors, music was the medium which best suited him to give voice to that "burning fire within", to few men or women has been given such an abundant gift of fertile genius wherewithal to enrich the world of music.

As I have said, so much has been written on Beethoven that to add yet further contribution may seem presumption. Yet there is ever some thing new and fresh to be written—some hidden fact of his life and work that has not before been expressed. Since his Violin Concerto is to be played in tonight's Prom, it seems opportune to recall something of the man as he is known today.

He lived from 1770 to 1827, into which 57 years of life he crowded Chamber Music, Concertos, Symphonies, choral works, songs and an opera. Why exactly, he never wrote more operatic works is something of a mystery. Possibly he found the limitations of the libretto and the subservience of the orchestra to the voice a handicap. The genius that was in him would not be denied, nor recognise any limitations.

"Fidelio"—the opera in question—is still performed quite often today, but the canvas is, I feel too small to allow the full colours of his pallet to be used. Beethoven demands—as is his right—an unlimited field for his activity, and the opera was not the medium to afford him such an unrestricted field. His songs, too, are seldom heard, which fact, I think, lends colour to this theory.

Of his symphonies, abler pens than mine have written—dissected and analysed them, but above all the basic fact remains that they are glorious inspired music, of which one never tires. Sir Hubert Parry wrote "The era of Haydn-Mozart is one of the utmost crisis in the history of the symphony."

Out of that crisis emerged Beethoven, to create a new art-form, to produce new devices, to shatter the old-conceived ideals and to make such music as had not yet been contemplated. A man apart, aloof, reserved and inclined at times to a degree of moroseness, Beethoven was indeed a giant amongst men. The fervour of his writing has probably never been exceeded than in his Mass in D. Even the 9th Choral Symphony I think, falls short of the standard set in this former work.

This new conception of symphonic form implied greater demands on the orchestra and greater time in which to enable Beethoven fully to express himself. To illustrate this, compare Mozart's "Jupiter" Symphony (about 25 minutes) with the No. 9 Choral Symphony, taking about 90 minutes. The logical development of the symphony required this expansion and such was the urge Beethoven felt, that he now incorporated the human voice as an additional means of expression.

His "Pastoral" Symphony, too, must surely be one of the earliest excursions into the realms of programme music, which is what it is. This symphony depicts—as surely as any painting or essay—the essence of the countryside. There is the brook, the song of the birds, the storm and the sun breaking through. The "storm" music, I think, is particularly inspired. Wagner attempted to depict a storm both in "Die Walkyrie" and in "The Flying Dutchman," and although he had the advantage of richer orchestration, Beethoven surely captured the real spirit more successfully.

As he grew older, Beethoven infected his works with a spontaneous grace and gaiety, culminating in the delightful "Eroica" Symphony. The obvious joy he took in penning this great work is only exceeded by the finale of the Choral Symphony, to which I have already referred. It was after this symphony that Beethoven was afflicted by deafness; so severe was his infirmity that he turned once again to Chamber Music and the piano, and many of his posthumously published String Quartets were written at this time.

No reference to Beethoven can be complete without mentioning his Pianoforte Concertos, of which he wrote five. Opinions remain divided as to which is the greatest of these, but I think it is true to say that the last—the "Emperor" is probably most often performed. Whether this fact in itself is any criterion is a matter which is not my province to discuss. Some there are who hold the opinion that because music is "popular" (i.e., it is frequently performed) there must be a quality about it to render it hackneyed. Possibly this view is based on the truism that familiarity breeds contempt, a pundits to which I do not subscribe. It is certainly a false premise in the world of music, where surely the obverse operates. Does one ever tire of hearing "The Messiah," Schubert's Unfinished or "Rigoletto"? It seems to me the more one listens to great music, familiarity—far from breeding contempt—engenders fresh admiration for the beauty of the music as it is played.

To refer, particularly, to Beethoven's Violin Concerto, is now appropriate, then. This piece of violin music is so exacting in its demands on the performer that its success indeed hangs on a thread. In the hands of Kreisler—who is to be soloist tonight—success is assured and although I do not know this recording, the beauty of the music will be given its fullest import by this accomplished performer. This concerto is not a background against which the performer can flaunt pyrotechnical accomplishments to his own aggrandisement. He must give of his best to produce the required beauty of tone and phrasing which alone can do justice to the music into which, says Grove, "Beethoven has poured his soul."

Also to be heard is the "Carolian" Overture, a noble piece of orchestral music which is again a masterpiece in itself.

DEBUSSY

The last item in the Prom is Debussy's "La Mer" which is a suite of three symphonic sketches, in the romantic style. It is a "pen-picture," just as "Le Cathédrale Engloutie" and Sibelius "Finlandia" are pictures of fixed scenes or impressions. Debussy died in 1918 towards the end of World War I, so that he may be classed as a "modern" in every sense of the word. His "L'apres-midi d'une faune," has achieved a high degree of popularity, although probably it cannot be classed as amongst the best of his works.

TUESDAY'S CONCERT

Next Tuesday (25th May) the third of the orchestral concerts will be on the air, when the programme is devoted to Mozart.

The programme scheduled is:—

Piano Concerto in F. Major

Artur Schnabel and the London Symphony Orchestra conducted by Sir Malcolm Sargent.

Horn Concerto in E flat Major

Aubrey Brain and the B.B.C. Symphony Orchestra conducted by Sir Adrian Boult.

Symphony 34 in C Major

Boston Promenade Orchestra conducted by Serge Koussevitsky.

The classical pianoforte concerto, as such, began with Mozart and in all he wrote 25, a prodigious output since he was only 35 years old when he died.

Into that short span of years he crowded opera, chamber music and many other concertos, all of which music is utterly delightful. The delicacy of structure in these pianoforte concertos is such as scarcely to take them outside the scope of chamber music. Indeed, no performer of any standing requires to use the full capabilities of the piano, in these concertos. There is about them all a gossamer-like quality which has rarely been equalled by other composers. It would be difficult, I think, for those who feel that music is not to their taste, to find any composer more likely to confound this feeling than Mozart.

The Horn Concerto is one of the very few ever written for this difficult instrument. In the hands of Aubrey Brain 1st horn player in the B.B.C. Symphony Orchestra—technical difficulties will not detract from the music. There can be few musicians so capable today as Aubrey Brain of equaling the demands put upon the performer by this Concerto.

All in all, a Mozart evening is a "high-spot" of listening and certainly this programme is one which should not be missed. It is a pity that one or more of the arias from some of Mozart's operatic works are not included, but demands on programme-time at ZBW will not, I assume, permit of this.

Y.M.C.A. CONCERT

The programme for next Friday's concert of the Y.M.C.A. Music Group is as follows:

Polka and Fugue: Schwanda the Bagpipe player, Weinberger. Carnival of the animals, Saint-Saëns. Concerto for violin in D. Major, Op. 19 Prokofieff. Symphony No. 7 in, A. Major, Op. 92 Beethoven.

Health PageWhy Dentists Fight
The Health Act

By H. Buchanan

Secretary of the British Dental Association

Every house-holder has recently had a copy of the Ministry of Health's leaflet "The New Health Service."

In this leaflet the Minister disingenuously prepares for a breakdown in the dental scheme by suggesting that full service cannot be provided because there are at present "too few dentists."

This statement would have been much more nearly accurate had Mr. Bevan said that there would be "too few dentists" willing to work his scheme.

The dentists object to the present scheme because it is unfair both to the patient and to them. If John Citizen wants treatment under the scheme he will have to find a dentist who is taking part in it.

Wait And Pay

That dentist will have to complete a typical Government form — two full pages of it. If Mr. Citizen only wants ordinary fillings and, perhaps, an odd extraction the dentist can carry on.

But if, as will usually be the case, something more is needed — a crown, an inlay or extractions which will make dentures necessary — then he must wait until the dentist has sent in an estimate and had it approved by the Dental Estimates Board.

Even then John Citizen will have to have standard treatment except in quite exceptional circumstances. The ministry of Health's leaflet says: "If you want anything specially expensive you will pay the extra cost yourself."

This is most misleading. John Citizen can only pay extra if he is going to have a metal denture or gold fillings, inlays, or crowns. In no other ordinary case can the dentist charge any additional fee at all.

If John wants anything else he will have to pay the whole cost himself.

How will this work out in practice? It will mean that the really good dentist, who has spent time and money in keeping abreast of all modern developments, who maintains a surgery with the most up-to-date equipment, who has a competent chairside assistant and who really tries to give every patient something above the average can only be paid just the same fee as that minority of the profession who only maintain the minimum degree of efficiency essential to the practice of dentistry at all.

Probably John Citizen's dentist will be in the first class, and in that case Honest John will discover that his dentist cannot afford to enter the service, because to do so would mean lowering the standard of treatment and amenities on which his practice has been built.

Thus John Citizen will have the choice of forgoing all his right to free dental treatment or of finding some other dentist who is working under the scheme.

This new dentist will not know him and may probably be one in whom John has little or no real confidence.

Even if John Citizen finds a dentist who is willing to accept Health Service patients he will have to be satisfied with plain "utility" dentistry.

No 'Trimmings'

This does not mean bad dentistry — no dentist worthy of the name does "bad" dentistry.

It means dentistry without any "trimmings." But dentistry is an art, and the finer types of dentistry require a leisurely approach, the expenditure of added time and care, the use of more expensive methods and materials.

All these will be actively discouraged under a system which prohibits the payment of any extra fee, and leaves the dentist face to face with the fact that his only way of increasing his income is to see more patients and to increase the speed at which he operates.

That is Mr. Bevan's scheme from the patient's point of view.

Clerks Approved

From the dentist's point of view there are other objections. There is, for example, the question of submitting an estimate of his proposed treatment to a Government committee — the Dental Estimates Board — for approval.

This Dental Estimates Board consists of five full-time dentists, two part-time dentists, two lay members, and an unspecified number of clerks. They will

PENICILLIN UNDER STUDY

One of the largest and newest factories in Britain for the manufacture of the drug penicillin, discovered and developed by British scientists, hopes shortly to produce the drug in a form which will keep for a long period irrespective of climatic conditions.

The crystalline form, which will store in hot climates, has already been produced at another British factory, but the method entails severe loss of output. The development now being pushed forward is expected to give a lasting type without loss of the volume of production.

This news of the progress being made was given by the manager of a plant at Speke, near Liverpool, operated by the Distillers Company. He told the visiting Chinese, Indian, Malayan and Eurasian Editors from Malaya that the factory is already producing four times the quantity of penicillin it was estimated to turn out when it was opened in 1945.

The delegates toured the works and saw processes by which a tiny quantity of spores is employed to maintain the output of hundreds of thousands of doses every week.

The delegates were intensely interested by the elaborate precautions taken at every stage of manufacture to test and re-test in order to be certain that the penicillin was chemically and biologically perfect.

have to approve anything up to 150,000 dental estimates a day.

Obviously, then, most of the "approval" will be given by lay clerks. Dentists with many years of training and experience who want to extract four teeth and provide a small denture to replace them will have to delay the start of treatment until a Civil Service clerk has given them permission to proceed.

At A Disadvantage

Could anything be more absurd or more humiliating to a man who has spent five years and probably £1,000 in obtaining that professional knowledge and skill of which he is rightly proud?

The British Dental Association has decided that it cannot advise its members to take part in any scheme which puts the more competent and enthusiastic members of the profession at a disadvantage in comparison with those few who are below even the average level of skill.

The Association has decided, also, that the freedom of the practitioner to give his patient the treatment which he considers to be in that patient's best interests must be safeguarded at all costs.

So far as the latter point is concerned, we can see no reason for burdening the whole profession with a humiliating and unfair regulation which, as the Ministry of Health themselves admit, is only put forward as a safeguard against an insignificant minority of the profession.

As regards fees, the Association advocates a system of grant-in-aid by which all that is best in the present system of private practice could be preserved.

The patient, under this system could have whatever treatment he wanted, could arrange with the dentist a mutually satisfactory fee, and could obtain, towards that fee, a grant-in-aid on a fixed scale.

A system of this sort is already working satisfactorily in France, in Belgium, and in Norway.

For Safeguards

The profession has other important objections to the scheme as at present laid down.

We still, however, want to see a scheme in which we can whole-heartedly co-operate for the good of the whole community.

But we must fight to secure a scheme which will really benefit the public and which will also safeguard the vital interests of the science and art of dentistry now and in the future.

Our Short Story BORN UNDER CAPRICORN

BY NEVIL DUGGAN

The remarkable thing about Elias Martin was his stomach. It was colossal, stupendous, one of those stomachs which seem to be the complete man.

Elias kept the only pub in Dungaree, and although it gave him an air of good fellowship, he was no good-natured fool.

Sandy and I were only kids, but we had often done odd jobs, messages and the like, for Martin, and we knew that the legend of his good fellowship was as false as his stomach was real.

That was why I knew there was something in the wind, when Martin called me into the pub and gave me a lemonade.

He leaned across to me, with his stomach sort of sitting on the counter; and his little piggy eyes gleamed in what I knew was meant to be a benign expression.

"That goat of Sandy's," he said. "It is very fast!"

The Billy Goat Cup was due to be run next Sunday, and Sandy's goat, Lysander, was favorite.

Suddenly I remembered that Martin as well as being the town's only publican, was also the town's only bookmaker.

"Pretty fast," I agreed, waiting for what I guessed would follow.

"It will win the cup?" he asked. "Or maybe you and Sandy don't think it can win?"

"Maybe," I said, eyeing him narrowly.

"Maybe," he echoed mockingly. "Yes, maybe Sandy and me, we could do a bit of business. It might be worth twenty-five quid, if Lysander did not win that cup."

Just then some of the men from the tannery came into the bar and Martin seemed to forget all about me. I slipped away and ran breathlessly to where Sandy was rubbing down Lysander's coat. Twenty-five pounds! Gee, neither of us had ever even thought about that much money!

Sandy listened to me in silence; but he kept looking from me to Lysander. I knew what he was thinking, and I had a fair idea of the struggle that was going on inside him. Twenty-five pounds was like a dream of wealth; but there was also his loyalty to Lysander, that wonder goat, who had never yet been beaten.

"Joe," he said slowly. "You go back to Martin, and tell him that Lysander will not win, providing the money is paid over before the day of the race."

I did as I was told, and when I came back with the news that Martin agreed, I could not look squarely into the goat's funny, bearded face. It seemed as bad as kicking a feller when he's down, this arrangement to sell Lysander's reputation.

On Saturday morning when we were brushing Lysander, after his final trial, Sandy looked at me across the goat's back.

"Joe," he says, "you've got a cousin who lives on the other side of the town, haven't you?"

I looked at him in surprise. I knew that he knew my secret shame was Algy, my cousin; for Algy was a queer sort of guy, who like school and was not popular with the fellers. You'll guess what I felt about him when I tell you that he wore horn-rimmed glasses and read poetry for pleasure.

"Do you think you could get Algy to come to the races, tomorrow?" Joe asked.

I was stunned. Somehow goats and poetry do not seem to go together, but I took his proposition to Algy that night. He looked thoughtfully at me through his shining goggles.

"I really think I might come," he said slowly. "The struggle between these caprid champions might prove homeric. From watching the spectators one might gain some measure of insight into the mental processes of the ancient Greeks."

"Then you'll come?" I asked.

He nodded.

When we arrived at McCulloch's paddock, which was the racecourse for the day, he was waiting for us. I brought him over to Sandy and the way those two struck up a friendship left me sort of cold. Not that I was jealous, but it did seem pretty silly, for a feller like Sandy to stand there in front of everybody with his arm around that mug's shoulders.

Sandy grinned at me as he climbed into the cart; but I could not smile back. Sick at heart, I turned away:

for I had made up my mind that I would not watch Lysander's downfall.

I could tell by the noise that the race had started. I did not want to see. I ducked my head and pushed toward the back of the crowd. Suddenly, I found myself close to the enormous stomach of Elias Martin. I watched that monstrous protuberance lose its dignity and heave in violent agitation; and as I slowly lifted my eyes to his face, I saw that his mouth was twisted in hate.

"The double-crosser!" he gasped.

"He's going to win."

My heart lifted. I twisted around, and saw Lysander passing the post, an easy winner.

The crowd seemed to go mad then, and I think that I was the maddest in it. Suddenly I was sobered, as I heard the squeaky voice of Algy at my elbow. I watched him, his goggles shining, his face aglow, present a betting ticket to Elias Martin.

"Now let's see," he drawled. "I invested £25 and you bet me three to one, which I thought was a remarkably generous price about a goat with the winning form of Lysander. So that is £100 I collect."

I watched in amazed silence as he collected the packet of notes from Martin, and dazedly, followed him through the crowd.

There were a lot of people around Sandy and Lysander, but as soon as he saw Algy, Sandy ran over to meet him at the water tank, beside the shed. Then as I saw Algy pass the money to Sandy, I understood.

Sandy had had to get someone unknown to Martin to make the bet; for it was Martin's own money he was laying the odds to.

From behind the water tank a vast stomach slowly emerged, followed by Martin's fuming face.

"So," he snarled, "I thought as much. I'll break every bone in your body, you double-crossing, little . . ."

He reached for Sandy's shoulder, but suddenly Algy slipped in between them.

"Now, look here, Martin," he cried, poking a skinny finger into the soft mass of Martin's stomach. "You've had a lesson. It would be better to take it like a man. If you had made better use of your time and studied the classics, you'd have known that virtue is always triumphant. And besides, I cannot help wondering what that excited crowd of people over there would do, if they found out that you had tried to stop Lysander winning."

Twice Martin's mouth opened and shut like a fish gasping for air. He looked at the crowd around Lysander, and suddenly his show of truculence collapsed. Slowly his vast stomach seemed to go down like a deflated balloon, and to hang before him in a defeated mass.

"Virtue!" he mumbled. "If you kids

Asking For Trouble

By
PETER QUENNELL

I am often astonished that since, judging by the books they produce, most modern novelists suffer from a chronic shortage of material, so few of them should have the courage and the imagination to choose London as their subject. For what subject could provide them with more splendid opportunities?

Dr. Johnson observed that the man who was tired of London was also tired of life. And the novelist who at one time or another has not been stirred by the spectacle of our gigantic yet oddly homely, hideous yet surprisingly beautiful, drably familiar yet—in many of its by-ways—almost unexplored metropolis must, I cannot help suspecting, have something strangely wrong with him....

It is always heartening, then, to discover a writer who employs the contemporary London scene not merely as a background, but attempts to infuse the spirit of the place into the substance of his story.

T. O. Beachcroft, for example. His new book is at its best when he is writing of London streets and the men and women who inhabit them; of an ordinary London pub and a kindly, frowsy barmaid; of her girl-friend and her cat, and her meditations on life as, with a pat at her brassy curls, she keeps the swimming counter.

Up to this point the result is admirable. Rose takes a maternal interest in wayward, pretty Norah, who is Asking for Trouble when she rejects the advances of an honest fish-and-chips admirer, preferring the spivvish charms of a handsome fly-by-night, who stays her with double gins and comforts her with expensive meals at a flashy Soho restaurant.

The matter-of-factness of the book is its strength. Its weakness is a strain of melodrama that invades the second half of the story. The novelist seems thoroughly at home with Rose, but to have only a nodding—or cinematographic—acquaintance with racketeers and murderers.

T. O. Beachcroft has his feet on the pavement. Peter Traill and Louise de Vilmorin—otherwise as dissimilar as it is possible for two novelists to be—take off from "real life" into the freer world of fantasy.

Thus Peter Traill's principal character, though her influence prevades the narrative, is an exquisite young woman—a dainty enigma in porcelain—whom we never meet face to face.

We hear of her again and again: we observe the curious effect that she has had on the lives of other people; but Lady Iris remains elusive, still haunting, but no longer inhabiting, a peaceful urban backwater.

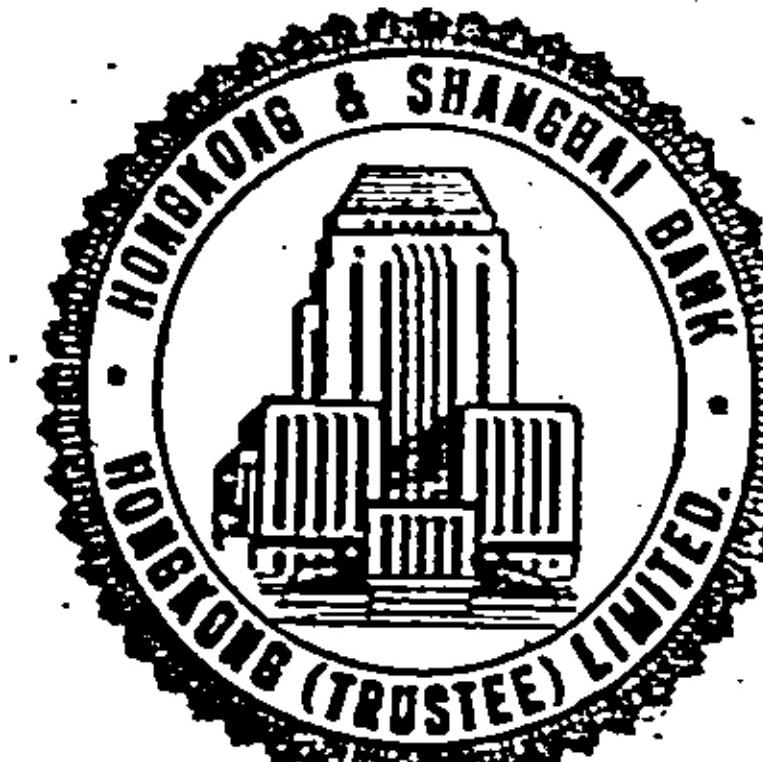

Why she has had this peculiar effect does not emerge until we reach the last pages, where the novelist provides a solution of the mystery and sketches a tentative philosophy of existence at one and the same moment. The preliminary "build-up" is uncommonly ingenious. The Portly Peregrine is a book that will please as well as puzzle you.

The Tapestry Bed is the work of a poetess. Its setting is 19th century France; its theme, the tragicomic deception practised by a ridiculous little prison-governor, who appropriates, and passes off as his own, the musical compositions of an ill-fated prison genius.

A novel in miniature, but hard to forget. Highly imaginative, at times fantastic, it has just enough solidity to make the story plausible.

are virtue, then I'm that damned goat's brother."

"Really, Mr. Martin," said Algy, pocketing his share of the winnings. "You must not take it badly. You'll get quite a lot of comfort from the belief that these things happen, according to a pre-destined plan. You know, I'd be willing to wager that you were born under Capricorn, the sign of the goat."

THE PLAN

When the Partition borders were drawn it was estimated that the Jewish State would include some 400,000 Arabs as well as about 500,000 Jews. The Arab State would contain 725,000 Arabs and about 10,000 Jews.

The Jews have declared that it is no part of the Jewish aim to drive out the Arabs now living in the Jewish State area, but to give them absolute equality and citizenship with the rest.

The Arab war aim can be simply stated. It is to defeat the Zionists in battle and thus compel them to renounce their aim of a Jewish State.

The Arabs want an unpartitioned Palestine. They say bluntly that Palestine is an Arab country and ask why it should be mutilated and divided for the best part of it to become a Jewish State for the reception of Jewish immigrants from Europe.

An undivided and independent Palestine is therefore the Arab aim—Arab Palestine in which there would be a willingness to accept Jews as citizens, with equal voting and other citizenship rights.

Population Rise

The Arabs would also limit or stop the flow of Jewish immigrants into Palestine from Europe and elsewhere, regarding this flow as being against the wishes of the majority of Palestinians.

They are not out to kill all Jews as Jews, but they do want to defeat what is described as a political challenge to their natural right in their own country.

On the immigration point it is noted that in 1923, when Britain's Mandate began, the Jewish population of Palestine was 89,000. In 1938 it had risen to 411,000. Now it is estimated to be 640,000.

"We shall go on fighting," say the Arabs, "until the Jews give up what we consider to be their unjustified pretensions in Palestine."

THE WAY OF A TOMBOY

PART III

Just where she was going Billy Rawson had not the faintest idea. But she was determined to go somewhere, and do something.

As the lorry jolted along the road, she hoped she would get somewhere near the river and the waterfall the triplets had mentioned. The truth was, that she was longing for a sight of water. She closed her eyes and saw again her home on Long Neck Headland with the gulls soaring in a blue sky.

"Hey, there, where did you come from?" The voice was loud and angry from the fruiterer at the wheel of the lorry.

The tomboy opened her eyes, watched the pavement flowing beneath her and, swinging herself to one side, dropped lightly. After a little run, she pulled up and watched the lorry turn a bend and disappear.

Billy had been such a short while at Cliffdale School that she did not know the locality well. But she knew this back street led somewhere to the river.

It was a mild Saturday afternoon and spring was in the air. She walked slowly to one side of the road where the grass was high and where some wild flowers were growing. She had not gone far when she met a girl about her own age in shorts and wheeling a bike.

"Could you tell me if I'm near the river?" asked Billy, instantly liking the girl, who had a small, rounded, freckled face and twinkling brown eyes.

"It's not far off, if you like walking," replied the girl, "I'm going that way. Like to double up with me on the bike? You can have the seat and I'll stand and pedal."

"I think I'll walk, thanks all the same," replied Billy. "That's one thing I've never done—and that's try to ride a bike."

"I'll come, too." The girl was all friendliness and eager to talk.

As they walked along, Billy explained that she was a bit tired of the school and the stranger, whose name was Olive Sullivan, gave an envious sigh.

"Why, it's a grand school," she said. "Do you know the triplets—Margaret, May and June Wilkins?"

Children's PageINTERNATIONAL HOSTESS AT 17

One day after official mourning for the late President Manuel A. Roxas ended, May 18, the new First Lady of the Philippines was 17 years old.

Barely out of bobby-socks, short, slim vivacious Victoria ("Vicky") Quirino will become official hostess for her widowed father, Ellpidio Quirino, when the family moves into the Presidential palace later this month.

Vicky is the only living daughter of the Philippines' new President. Her two sisters died with her mother and a brother during the liberation. So, now that fate has catapulted her father into the Presidential chair, to teen-aged Vicky falls a task which might shake a woman twice her age—the job of presiding over the social life of an entire country. Her father already has said that such is his wish.

"LIKE A DREAM"

How does it feel to be the daughter of the President of the Philippines? Well, Vicky can tell you:

"It's just like a dream to me. I can't yet believe that I am the President's daughter. Maybe one day I'll wake up and realise that I really am the daughter of the President of the Philippines."

Vicky's interests appear to parallel those of the average girl her age in the States. She likes movies, roller skating and a good time with people her own age. She has just graduated from high school where her favourite subject was English. If she goes on to college, she will probably major in this subject.

Her closest friends are the teen-aged daughters of neighbours with whom she has grown up. Five of the girls are now living with her in the Quirino family home. And, when she enters the marble halls of Malacanang Palace, Vicky says she hopes to take them along too.

Vicky already has many admirers. When she stands first in the receiving line at Malacanang, the unusually mature dignity and poise of the pretty, oval-faced, 17 year old First Lady undoubtedly will win her many more.

Nostalgia (nostalgia): Home-sickness, a longing to return to one's country.

Publisher (publisher): One who prints books, papers, etc., and issues them to the people.

Ptomaine (to-main): Poisonous substance which is formed in bad food. Eating this causes ptomaine poisoning.

Remorse (remors): A sense of guilt (conscience-stricken).

Scholar (skolar): One who is studying, either at a school or an institute of learning.

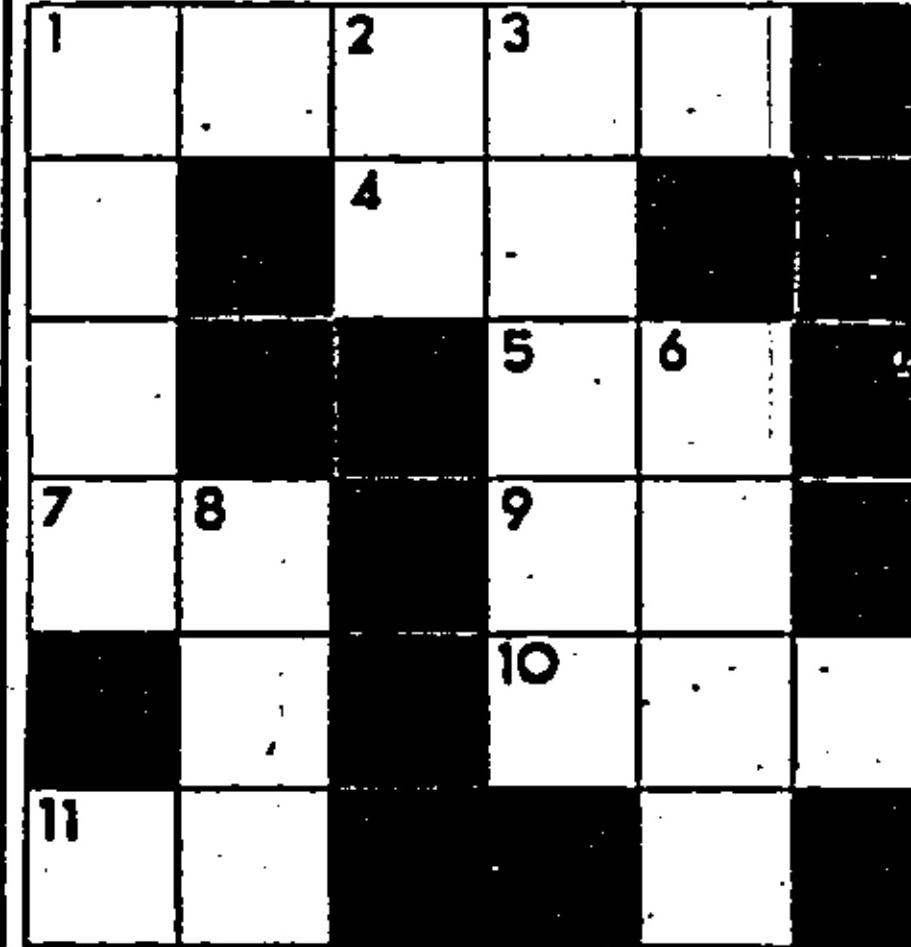

Shamble (shamblin): To walk with a shuffle, without lifting the feet.

Magazine—Children—ADD SPOTlight
There are two happy boys in Sydney at present. They are Lennie and Hughie Sadlier, aged 14 and 12.

They are making their first appearance on the professional stage in the pantomime "Mother Goose" at the Sydney Tivoli and they're very good, too.

They play the part of "Pansy" the horse. Lennie (14) is the front half and Hughie is the back. They dance and handle the horse and consider they are doing a very important job.

Lennie is responsible for making the horse laugh, cry and wink its eye. The lads are receiving £5 a week each.

Last time "Mother Goose" was played in Sydney, J. C. Williamson's well-known theatrical firm in Australia, brought two men from Britain to play the front and back of the horse and they received £100 a week each.

George Formby and Wee Georgie Wood, who is a famous Sydney comedian, saw the boys perform and have advised their parents to put them into show business. (From Alice Dawson, Sydney.)

PUZZLE ANSWER

Fifteen-year-old Angela Glynne is no stranger to a microphone. Born in London, she made her first public appearance when she was eighteen months old, in a comedy film. Until she was seven she worked hard at several films, but then she was shipped off to America, where she did radio plays and also appeared on the stage. Then the school authorities caught up with her! She was told she must go to school until she was 12, and so she did. But after she was twelve Bud Flanagan (one half of Flanagan & Allen) approached her, and she joined him on the stage. She has made several more films, broadcast regularly, and has been televised in a serial story of "Alice in Wonderland".

But even then Angela had to keep up with her schooling, although now that she is so busy she has a private tutor.

Talking about Films.THE HAMLET OF LAURENCE OLIVIER

By Fred Majdalany

Let me begin by saying that I was moved by Sir Laurence Olivier's film of "Hamlet" than by any stage production of the play that I can remember.

Cinema highbrows may say that it contains too much Shakespeare and too little cinema; theatre professors that too much Shakespeare has gone so that the story can move with filmic speed and tension.

But, like G.B.S. on another occasion, both must admit that the result is not at all unlike Shakespeare's play of the same name.

For myself, I consider that a model compromise has been reached. The greatness of the play has been contained in 150 minutes of film. The story emerges dramatically heightened, and with the freshness of something seen for the first time.

The ticklish task of adapting the play has been carried out with beguiling skill and courage by Alan Dent. He has jettisoned Rosencrantz and Guildenstern (whom I always felt ought to be a team of song-writers) as ruthlessly as Hamlet did himself.

And it probably hurt him as much as it hurt us to eliminate the two soliloquies ("How all occasions do inform against me" and "O, what a rogue and peasant slave am I") which have a pretty vital bearing on Hamlet's character.

He has, however, improved the duel scene (brilliantly executed) by tidying up that business of the swapping of swords which I have always thought a Shakespearian loose end.

The trouble with the character of Hamlet is that everyone has a theory about it.

It is not the between-wars Piccadilly neurotic which some actors have given us. Nor the pale, Third Programme poetry-reader with an Oedipus complex into which psychiatrists have gleefully turned him.

This is an unmistakably noble prince, with passion rather than petulance. A man of the most extreme sensitivity, who might also have captained Elsinore at Rugger. The range of feeling is enormous, and this must rank as one of the great acting performances of our time.

The supporting performances are uniformly excellent. Jean Simmons' Ophelia, which at one point seemed about to suggest Alice "reciting," developed a most touching tenderness and the aspect of a demented baby angel.

Eileen Herlie's Queen has exactly the right mixture of sex, mother, and weakness. Only lack of space prevents fuller tribute to the Polonius of Felix Aylmer, the King of Basil Sydney, the Grave-digger of Stanley Holloway, the Laertes of Terence Morgan, the Horatio of Norman Wooland, the designs of Roger Furse, and the music of William Walton.

Will this film be "caviare to the general"? I hope not. Apart from the traditional delight of Hamlet first-timers, the "quotations," even the most rabid Lockwoodophiles, Rockfellers, and Neaglets can hardly be untouched by the greatest words in literature, spoken by actors who not only understand their music and their poetry and their meaning but say them without idolatry and with a sort of inspired enjoyment.

For the genius of Sir Laurence Olivier, who conceived, produced, and directed the film (besides the additional minor stint of playing Hamlet) there has been overwhelming acclaim.

If we personally desist from the standard superlatives which go with such occasions, it is because they have been depreciated by so much misuse.

I am content to take the stupendous as read, and merely add my belief that in years to come, when new generations rave about new favourites, we oldsters will smirk foxily like Polonius, and murmur: "Ah, but you never saw Olivier!"

There is so much to take in at a first view of "Hamlet" that the following post-scripts to my original notice may be helpful.

PS. Note how the camera weaves and turns and rolls and practically ogles at the characters, so that they are never merely smutty words at you.

PS. 2. Note the deep-focus photography (a new technical development) which makes it possible for figures to approach from a long way off and be in focus all the time. The use of this device results in some of the most beautiful pictorial effects in the film.

PS. 3. Note how the cinema has been able to go one better than the stage in presenting Hamlet's soliloquies as "thinking aloud" (to use Hazlitt's phrase) rather than as speeches.

PS. 4. Note how the grave-yard sequence builds up and up. First the hearty tap-room humour of Stanley Holloway's Grave-digger, merging perfectly into the pathos of Hamlet's "Alas, poor Yorick"; followed by the heart-rending scene as Ophelia's body is lowered into the grave; and finally the sudden blaze of violence between Laertes and Hamlet.

This "Hamlet" would inevitably dwarf anything else presented in the same week. It happens though that the other new films take very little dwarfing.

In "This Was a Woman" Sonia Dresdel is at some pains to point out that a boy's best friend is not necessarily his mother.

She has the part of a matriarch with a craving for power and an uncontrollable urge to run other people's lives.

She practically hypnotises her medical-student son into passing his exams; breaks up her daughter's marriage because her son-in-law is not sufficiently distinguished; torments (and ultimately poisons) her husband because she considers him a mediocrity.

Miss Dresdel is no great lover of understatement, and she gives this part the works from the word go.

Her eyes narrow and glower venomously. Her nostrils dilate and undilate. Her lips kiss and snarl and spit. Viper tongues seem to dart out from all over her. Her veins quiver and tingle, and her hands always seem to be wanting to strangle somebody.

COMING TO THE

In the circumstances it seemed odd that it took the family (which consisted of Barbara White, Emrys Jones, and Waltar Fitzgerald) so long to get wise to her.

A feeling of melancholy now overcomes me whenever I see Peter Lorre's shiny rubber face and hear his liquid voice. I can't get scared by it any more.

I was unable, therefore, to be greatly terror-stricken by The Beast with Five Fingers a macabre little ghost story about a long hand which returns from the grave and puts the fear of God into an Italian household by playing the piano and strangling people.

If you chill easily, you might get some simple pleasure out of it.

BEHIND THE WAR IN PALESTINE

THE LEADERS

THE PLAN

ARABS

Over-all Commander-in-Chief of the Arab forces in Palestine is General Ismail Safwat Pasha, a professional soldier who was at one time Assistant Chief of Staff to the well-organised Iraqi Army.

In his hands are the planning and conduct of the entire Arab military effort. That will still be his function even with the Emir Abdullah of Transjordan coming into the active picture, who has the titular leadership of the combined Arab armies, but the Iraqi general will still direct and control them.

The Arab leader in the field is Fawzi Kawikji, 53-year-old fighter with a picturesque career that dates from the 1914-18 war. He has fought over the Palestine deserts before, is a brilliant and daring guerilla leader, and has been the hero of many exploits over the years that have acquired legendary quality throughout every Arab land.

Joined Rebels

Fawzi was born in Syria, and served in the Turkish Army in the 1914-18 war, obtaining the rank of captain after graduating from the Staff College at Istanbul. He showed unusual talent and initiative and finished that war with Turkish and German decorations.

After the French occupation of Syria he entered the French service as an intelligence officer, and was decorated with the Legion d'Honneur.

When the Druse revolt flared out, however, he joined the rebels and became one of the principal insurgent leaders in the fighting round Damascus. The French sentenced him to death, but when the revolt was finally crushed he escaped into the Hedjaz and became military adviser to King Ibn Saud. Later he obtained a commission in the Iraqi Army, and became an instructor at the Iraq Staff College.

Then, in 1936, he quit Iraq and entered Palestine to lead the Arab revolt that broke out that year and was to go on for the next three years. Arabs flocked to his standard for guerilla fighting and he explained that he was not warring against the British but Zionism.

In 1941 he took a part in the pro-German rebellion in Baghdad, and when that effort collapsed he was flown to Berlin by the Germans.

Magic Figure

There he stayed until the end of the war, when he found himself living in the Soviet zone of the city. The Russians turned a deaf ear to his application for leave to return to his own land. So one night he slipped quietly out of Berlin—and was next heard of in Cairo. Blue-eyed, slim, and tough, Fawzi is a magic figure among the guerilla Arab fighters. He links daring and imagination with sound military planning and can draw on years of hard experience for the battles he plans to lead against the Jews.

JEWS

The Jews have not yet disclosed who is, or who will be, the Commander-in-Chief of all their forces. So far Haganah, their national army, has been operating in self-contained local groups.

In any of the fighting to come, however, there are two figures of whose leadership a good deal will undoubtedly be heard.

One of these is Menachem Begin, tough, ruthless leader of Irgun Zvai Leumi, whose terrorist tactics of bombings and shootings have studded the past couple of years.

Price On Head

Not so many months ago Begin was the most-wanted man in Palestine, with a price of £2,000, dead or alive, on his head. Posters carrying his picture and description were posted throughout the land. But he kept his liberty.

Begin was once a law student at Warsaw University. He became a corporal in the Polish Army, and there is one story that he served with the British at Tobruk.

Whether that be right or not, it is a fact that somewhere around 1942 he was serving in Palestine with the Polish forces. The then leader of Irgun was David Raziel. The organisation had suspended its fight for a Jewish Palestine to join in the greater fight against the Nazis, and Raziel was sent on a sabotage mission for the Allies during the revolt in Iraq. He was killed, and the Zionists then asked for Begin's release from the Army to do "political work." It was granted, and the Polish soldier became the new leader of Irgun.

Violent Exploits

Today he is a pallid, thin-faced, hook-nosed man of 38 with the eyes of the fanatic burning behind his horn-rimmed spectacles and a wealth of "on-the-run" adventure behind him. Under his leadership Irgun was built up into a force of quick-striking, ruthless, and daring terrorists, with stop-at-nothing tactics, and a long list of violent exploits like the blowing-up of the King David Hotel in Jerusalem in 1946 has been laid at their door.

It is very doubtful if Begin will be given anything like over-all command of the Jewish forces, but his desperate Irgun formations, in which both men and women serve, are certain, under his leadership, to be well in the picture when real battle with the Arabs is joined.

The second Jewish leader of note is another from Poland—calm-looking, fair-haired Nathaniel Yellin, 31-year-old commander of the Stern Gang. He too, has been for long a man with a price on his head, dead or alive—in this case a price of £1,000.

The police once had him safely locked away. That was in November 1943. But he, and 20 others, made a brilliantly planned escape from Latrun Camp through a secretly constructed 60-yard-long tunnel. And it was from that date the Stern Gang gained new impetus and became the most terroristic band of all.

THE PLAN

Both Jews and Arabs have well-defined and clear-cut "war aims," for which they are prepared to fight tooth and nail.

The Jewish plan has crystallised into a hard resolve to seize and hold every inch of the territory allotted to the proposed Jewish State envisaged in the Partition Plan put forward last autumn.

Under this plan, which was drawn up by a special committee of the United Nations, Palestine would be divided into an Arab State, a Jewish State, and the autonomous city of Jerusalem.

The Jewish State would include Eastern Galilee, the Esdraelon Plain, most of the central coastal plain, including Haifa, Jaffa, and Tel-Aviv, and the Beersheba sub-district, including most of the Negev.

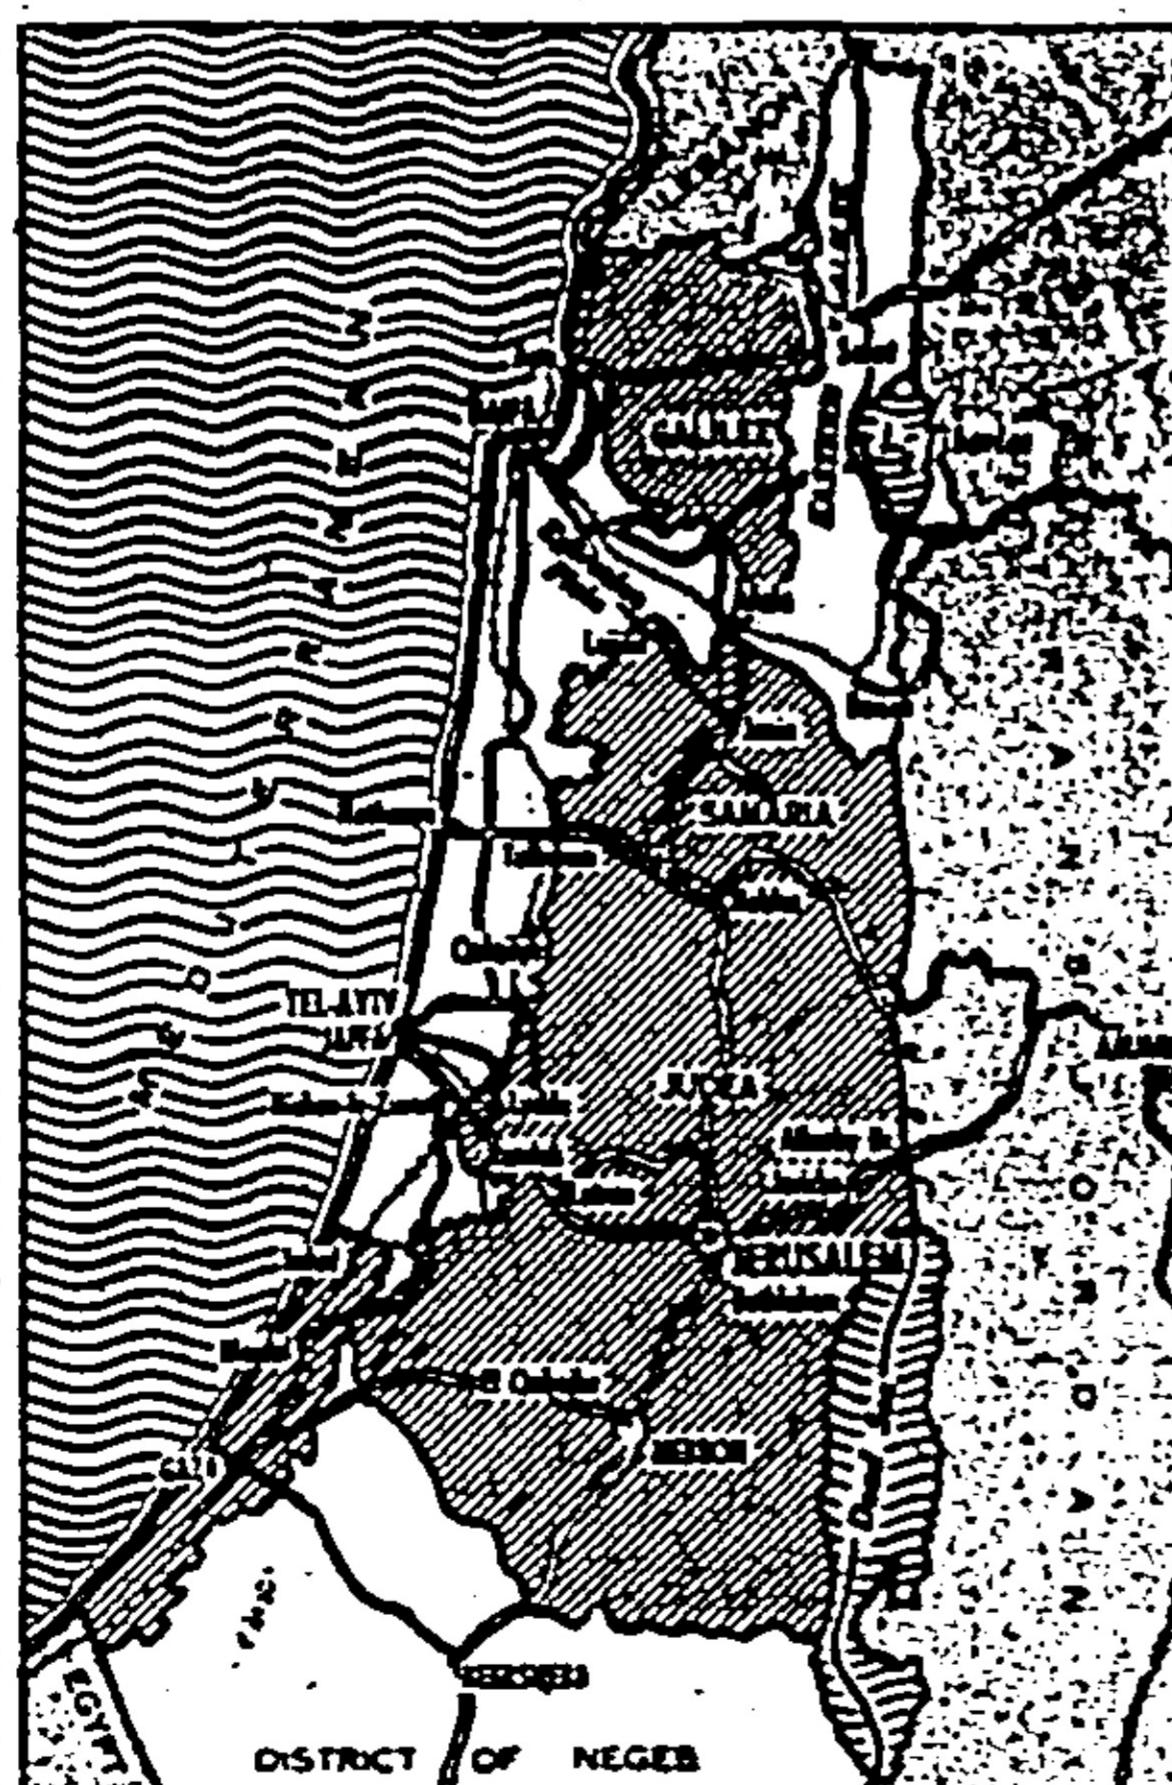

The Arab State would comprise Western Galilee, the hill country of Samaria and Judea—excluding Jerusalem—and a coastal strip in the south from Isdud down to the Egyptian frontier.

The War Aims

The autonomous area of Jerusalem would include Bethlehem, and would become a United Nations trusteeship. It would have a governor, appointed by the United Nations, who would be neither Jew nor Arab.

All the Jewish fighting, then, is directed to seizing the towns, villages, and land lying within the borders of the envisaged Jewish State, and to the safeguarding of the frontiers of this State.

A Man's Work Is Never Done

It is not always realised by animal lovers that there is a right and a wrong way to wash a dog in a sink.

First thoroughly wet the back of the dog with warm water (advises Domesticated George, vainly dipping the colander in the sink and looking around him hopefully for tea-cups).

Never fasten a dog to a tap while you hunt for an apron or it will slip its collar in a flash and be off like a thing possessed! (warns Domesticated George, adroitly cornering his pet behind the stove and dropping the soap in the coal scuttle).

Don't attempt to remove a greasy spot from its hindquarters with a wire pot-scourer or you'll make it bald (pleads Domesticated George, briskly applying a little Vit to an oil stain with the sink brush). Always remember that the hairs of a moulting dog are even worse than tea-leaves. They play the very devil with plugholes.

Leave a dog's nose alone unless you wish it to blow soap in your eyes! (shouts Domesticated George, angrily wiping his face with a tea-cloth). Before rinsing its head always fit its damn little feet with rubber overshoes! Otherwise it will scrabble wildly on the slippery porcelain and drench you to the skin!

In Parliament Today

"The House of Commons is suffering from an epidemic of bad manners. Courtesy is now almost a general practice, and even the pleasant habit of saying 'Good morning' to each other seems to have been discarded by many members."—An M.P. writes to an Editor. What might be called a scene of great national unimportance occurred in the House last night when this vital matter was raised at Question Time.

MR. SCRINCE (Lab., S. Minns): May I draw the Speaker's attention to the fact that not a single member of any party has so much as nodded to me yet, although it is my birthday?

MRS. MOGBIN (Lib., Gt. Bouncing): I know I am only a plain Liberal girl. Mr. Speaker, and not much sought after by members of the opposite sex, but to be studiously and persistently ignored by hundreds of Socialists—many of them with very hairy ears, if I may say so—is most wounding to feminine vanity.

SPEAKER: Perhaps the aggrieved and drab little member for Gt. Bouncing will permit me to wave this mace at her in a respectful way as some slight token of my regard and esteem.

COMMANDER SHUDDER (Con., Westminster): Is it not a matter of vital interest to our national life, Mr. Speaker, that cultured members of all parties shall greet my aunt, Lady Tadcaster, the wealthy and well-connected member for Shoreham, when they are privileged to see her on the Terrace?

SPEAKER: Before giving a ruling on so important a matter I should prefer to inspect the honourable and gallant member's smart and elegant attire at my leisure. Perhaps she will dine with me tonight and take in a show?

MR. MOUSE (Lab., The Chorlton): Will the Prime Minister inform the House if it is his intention in the near future to appoint a Minister for Manners at a lucrative salary? And, if it is, will he consider me?

No reply was returned to this question and the House then went into secret session. It was later learnt from an authoritative source that Mrs. Mumble, the stout and uncouth member for Lesser Snarling, had been put up to public auction and knocked down to the National Trust for £12. 6d.

BRIDGE

Although in the first of the two final matches of the Kempson and Gray teams Kempson led by 41 match points (about 3,000 points), his team lost heavily on four slam hands. The hand below is one of the four. His side lost 10 match points instead of gaining 10 on this hand.

S. A	H. A Q J x
D. x x x x
C. K x x x
S. K Q J x x	S. 10 x x x
H. 10 x x x x	H. K x x
D. Q x	D. K x
C. x	C. 10 x x x
S. x x x
H. x
D. A J 10 x x
C. A Q J x

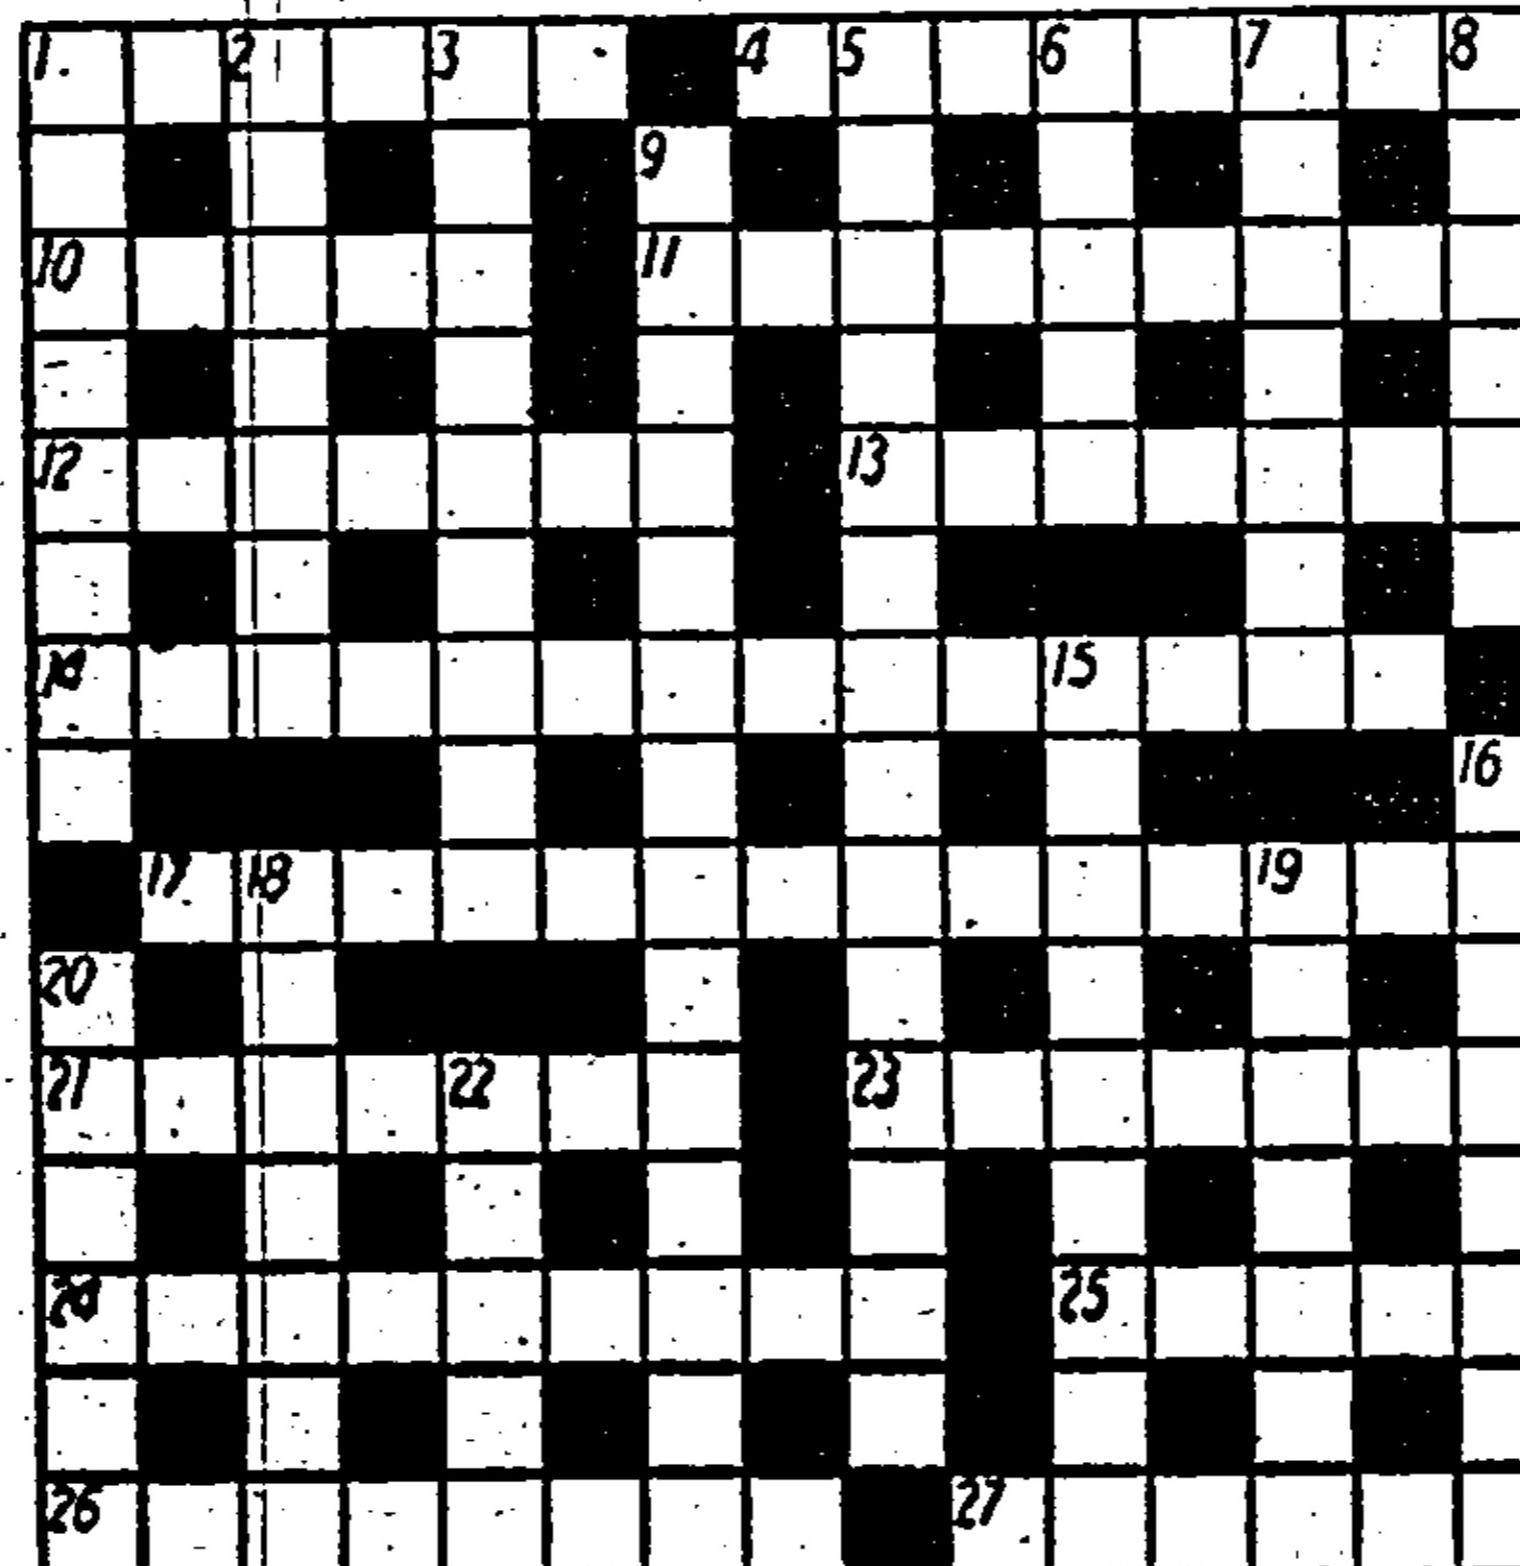

The bidding was as follows:

ROOM I.	ROOM II.
S. 1D	1D Pass 4C 5H
W. 1S	1S Pass Pass Pass
N. 2S	2H 3S 4NT 6C
E. 3S	2S Pass Pass Pass

In Room II, where the contract was Six Clubs, East's four Clubs were a menace. After the opening lead of the King of Spades the declarer took two rounds of trumps, and when West failed to follow switched to Diamonds and reached the seven-card position underlined above. He had lost one trick in Diamonds and must lose one more trick.

Had he counted two ruffs in Spades among his requirements he would not have led trumps at Trick 3 but attacked Diamonds first. The contract would then have been made. The chances he had to consider were: (a) 28 per cent. chance of a four and one division of the missing Clubs; and (b) the 50 per cent. chance of the missing Diamonds being three and one and 40 per cent. chance of them being two and two. All considered, trumps should not be attacked at once.

ANGLO-AMERICAN RELATIONS BECOMING TRIFLE STRAINED

Palestine Problem Misunderstandings Possible Way Out In Holy Land

New York, May 21. The Palestine problem is beginning to strain British and American relations. It has not reached a point of formal protest from either nation, but it may if Britain continues to aid the Arab nations attacking the Jews in the Holy Land. Privately, these charges were already being made: firstly, by the United States, that Britain is viewing the Palestine fighting from a long-range standpoint of ultimate British interest in the oil-rich Middle East and disregarding the fact that the obvious Arab aggression is killing the Jews.

2. By Britain, that the United States Administration is taking a short-term view motivated by political expediency due to the large Jewish population in America.

As of today the split is sharply defined. The United States has recognized Israel. Britain has not and her spokesman said she probably will not for some time.

In the Security Council the United States is pressing for an immediate cease-fire demand which would leave an open threat of economic sanctions and military action.

Britain wants to ask for a truce to provide for mediation but rule out any action to enforce peace.

Russia Stand

The United States is considering the lifting of its arms embargo to sell weapons to Israel. Britain is continuing to subsidize and equip the Arab armies and she will go right on doing so until the United Nations rules that the Arabs are guilty of aggression—a United Nations' action which Britain is strongly opposing.

It adds to a potential diplomatic explosion between the two most important western powers. Russia for a change is lined up with the United States, but in this case that makes little difference.

U.S. Advantage

In a showdown between Britain and the United States, Pre-

WHAT THE CHINESE PRESS IS SAYING

What The Chinese Press Is Saying
New Life Evening News: Lack of confirmation as to the genuineness of the letters allegedly left behind by the seven school children missing from their homes in Long places a limitation as far as comment on the subject is concerned.

Whether or not the letters are purely fabrications of one political party working against another we cannot say. One thing, however, is clear: party politicians have infiltrated into schools and are exploiting innocent children as tools.

Though it is needless to state we wish to register here our strong denunciation of the existence of politics in schools. On China's future generation lies the responsibility for reconstructing their country. As such, their attention should be mainly focused on the accumulation of science.

Irrespective of which party holds the reins of government in the next eight or 10 years and no matter what kind of foreign policy is then pursued, it is our duty to see that the future generation does not lack science.

Nothing can be more harmful and disastrous than to tolerate the teaching of school children to bubble in politics while the children of other nations forge ahead in the most advanced fields of knowledge.

Such tolerance can only bring disaster upon us, and cause irreparable damage to the nation as a whole.

Disappearances Of Children

Wah Kiu Yat Po: Recent repeated instances of school children missing from their homes are alarming. Measures are called for to guard against future similar incidents.

Although the cause of the mysterious disappearance of school children has not been ascertained, the general assumption is that it is political agitation forms the background to it all.

In most schools in Hong Kong, teachers are poorly paid. As a result they are forced to change their professions for other posts. This situation is welcomed by political agitators who are able to undertake the same teaching jobs under the same conditions with of course the support of subsidies from other sources.

As a diversion from the monotony of text books, they give lectures on the world situ-

Newsprint Warning

Ottawa, May 21. A warning that if Britain cuts her quota of Canadian newsprint she will find it hard later to raise her allocation was made today by an official representing Canadian newsprint manufacturers.

He was commenting on the statement that Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, had indicated by letter to a newsprint supply company that imports of newsprint from Canada and Newfoundland might be subject to further severe cuts next year.—Reuters.

Egyptian Delegation Threatened

New York, May 22. Police emergency and bomb squads searched today through the sixty-second floor offices of the Egyptian United Nations delegation in the Empire State Building.

The delegation secretary, Dolores Manclil, said that a soft-spoken man telephoned shortly before noon warning, "You are going to be bombed to bits in fifteen minutes."

Delegation officials hurriedly called police headquarters and the bomb and emergency squads made a thorough search without finding any explosive.

Miss Manclil said that in the past few weeks, the Egyptian Consulate had also received a number of bomb threat phone calls.—United Press.

PI Consulate At Amoy May Close

Manila, May 22. The Philippine Consul to Amoy, Mr. Meynardo Farol, in a report to the Foreign Affairs Office, has recommended closing the Philippine Consulate in Amoy on the grounds that the Philippines is "only gaining a bad name" by maintaining it.

Mr. Farol, who came here a few days ago from Amoy, denied that Consular officials were guilty of graft or corruption in handling visa applications at Amoy.

He said the Chinese could use the Shanghai or Hong Kong Consulates if the one at Amoy were closed.

Amoy newspapers recently charged that Philippine visas had been sold at high prices at Amoy.

Mr. Farol, plans to rejoin his family in Amoy on Monday.—United Press.

what King Farouk probably wanted in the south.

Britain then could recognise Israel and bring pressure on Abdullah and Farouk, both of whom are economically and militarily heavily dependent on her, to take their winnings and quit.

That seemed to be the shape of things to come but a few thousand determined Jews in Jerusalem are holding up the timetable.—United Press.

SOLDIER MURDERER?

Blackburn, May 22. The Chinese Constable of Cheshire stated today that a soldier has made a statement concerning crime and that "enquiries are being made about the matter mentioned in the statement."

He added: "It is too early to say whether the statement is true or not. It is not yet possible to say whether the statement will throw any light on the recent murders. The soldier is under detention by the military authorities for a military offence."

After a conference yesterday, the police chiefs decided to merge the efforts of all police forces in the areas of Bolton, Blackburn and Farnworth so as to avoid duplication in the hunt for the murderer.

The theory held is that one man committed both the Blackburn and Farnworth child murders.—Reuters.

Baron Okura, a friendly little chinpanzee of a man, lives in Tokyo. Once he was one of the wealthiest men in Japan. He made a fortune out of munitions—now he is broke.

He is concentrating on the development of his new musical instrument—the Okurulo, which is a combination of a Western flute and a Japanese bamboo flute.

He blows thin reedy notes on this instrument whenever interviewers call to see him and insists—between delicate birdcalls—that he prefers to be known now by his democratic musical pseudonym "Goshō" ("sound of the wind through the pine trees").

The Baron is typical of many of the once great, once wealthy, Japanese families who, according to an Occupation statement just issued, have fallen on evil days financially.

Penniless

Seldom, it would seem, have so many lost so much so comfortably or so gracefully.

Stout, smiling Baron Takakimi Mitsui, one-time wealthiest man in Japan, is another who hasn't got a yen in the bank today.

The eleven families who comprise the once-great House of Mitsui, have between them a miserable 241,000 yen (say £2,000 dollars or 300 pounds s.p.), at a realistic rate of 200 and 800 to one) frozen in the Tokyo Bank. The other nine great salbatzu (big business monopoly) names—representing forty-five families—are officially reckoned to remain between them 6,350,000 yen (31,780 dollars or £127,120) on deposit.

Of these forty-five, the four Arima families, the four Okura families, the five Makajima families, the two Furukawa families and the single Akiba family are in the same "penniless" position as the good Baron.

In 1940, these ten proud salbatzu groups or fifty-six families had an actual value of the securities highly uncertain.

At the free-market yen rate, they would not be worth much more than £250,000. But this is not a realistic problem for the families, because the stocks and shares have been confiscated and the proceeds, less 10 per cent.

held one-fourth of all Japanese business and industrial capital.

Notwithstanding war losses, the four wealthiest—the Mitsuis, the Iwasakis (who controlled huge holdings, mainly banking, shipping, and insurance), the Sumitomos and the Yasudas—had assets estimated at £50,000,000 in 1940.

Uncertain

Today their aggregate assets (distributed among thirty-six families) are officially recorded in the Occupation statement, issued by the Holding Company Liquidation Commission, at less than 1½ million pounds, of which real estate, personal property and "curios" are valued at £1,000,000, securities at £283,850 and bank deposits at £5,400.

administrative expenses, will not revert to the holders until—then—if—1953 or 1964.

On the other hand, the real value of the "curios" held in bond by the Occupation cannot be approximately represented in hard cash. Most of these rank as "national treasures"—they are virtually priceless.

For instance, the Sumitomos, who are older even than the Mitsuis, and who concentrated on heavy industry, banking and mining, are reputed in this Occupation statement to own "curios" valued at less than £15,000, but these are an incomparable and unsaleable collection of Chinese, Indian and Tibetan bronzes held in bond in Kyoto.

BATTLE OF THE GONGS

12,000,000 War Medals Are Being Struck But Many A Fighting Man Will Go Unhonoured.

By JOHN HALL

the toughest fights of the war. Yet they will see the France and Germany Star on people who did nothing more than see Paris on a one-day trip long after the fighting had reached the Siegfried Line.

This is because qualification for many of the medals is that the claimant merely made an "entry" into an operational area.

There is no air-crew Europe Star for men of R.A.F. Bomber Command who were pulled off bombing "ops" just before completing two months' duty.

There is scarcely any end to the anomalies and hardships of the share-out. So much so that many responsible people think it would be wisest to scrap the whole thing and revert to the pre-Waterloo practice of making awards for gallantry only.

That is because qualification for many of the medals is that the claimant merely made an "entry" into an operational area.

There have been some changes in the rules. Originally those entitled to the 1939-45 Star could qualify for the coveted Burma Star, but as this would have counted out some of the real fighters who slogged through places like the Arakan. It was dropped. Now anyone who made an "entry" east of the Brahmaputra River is eligible for the Burma Star.

The Claims.

From the authorities' viewpoint the biggest problem is the fact that since 1945 upwards of 9,000,000 people in Britain have changed their addresses, a large number of them ex-Service folk, and their former Services have lost track of them.

To overcome that snag it has been decided to issue millions of prepaid postcards to local post offices, and when the share-out begins every medal or star claimant will have to get a card, fill in the details of former rank, Service number, particulars of service, and current address, and post it to the Admiralty, Army, or R.A.F.

Merchant Navy men will post theirs to the Sup't. Registrar of Shipping.

Each postcard claim will be checked against unit records, and when that has been done the share-out, also by post, will begin.

The Official View

In charge of the share-out is the Committee on the Grant of Honours, Decorations, and Medals in Time of War. Civil Service chief Sir Edward Bridges is the current chairman.

This committee, in consultation with the Service chiefs, lays down the qualifications for each medal and star, defines the geographical area, fixes dates, etc., and the Services, working out who gets medals and who does not, must abide by the committee's rules.

No one claims the share-out to be even 90 per cent fair. They will tell you: "Whatever limits are set someone is bound to be just outside and it is impossible to devise conditions to cover every fine point. But having laid down the qualifications we must stick to them or the whole thing would become a farce."

SAFETY RULES AT SEA

London, May 21. All passenger ships of every nation are likely to carry at least one motor propelled lifeboat. This important recommendation has been made by the international conference on the safety of life at sea now meeting in London.

Five working committees are studying every aspect of this subject under the headings of constructions, life saving appliances, wireless communication, safety of navigation and general provisions.

A remarkable degree of unanimity has been achieved in formulating the recommendations.

The most important proposal put forward by the Life Saving Committee concerns additional safety measures for cargo vessels.

It is suggested that rules for appliances and drill which now apply to passenger ships should be extended to all cargo boats over 500 tons gross. It is also recommended that all new ships over 150 feet in length should be fitted with mechanical davits.

The Committee also feel that all lifeboats certified to carry 60 or more people should be fitted with mechanical means of propulsion.

BRITISH TRADE TALKS WITH RUSSIA

London, May 21. Britain has completed proposals for talks on a new trade pact with Russia, the United Press learned from authoritative sources today.

Negotiations are expected to start shortly, presumably next month, in Moscow.

Official sources admitted that experts and Departmental officials had been preparing proposals covering a wide field and could be ready for talks on short notice.

They envisaged discussions of a long-term treaty with Russia extending over a period of several years, providing for substantial increases in the volume of trade in both directions.

Press Talks In London

London, May 21. The Indian and Eastern News-paper Society's delegation to London for negotiations with Reuters, Limited, on the future of the Associated Press of India was completed by the arrival by air of Mr. Devadas Gandhi, managing editor of the Hindustan Times, New Delhi, and Mr. S. Sadanand, who controls the Free Press Journal, Bombay.

The distinguished visitors yesterday met members of the Reuter Board at a luncheon.

Later, the delegates had a discussion on procedure to be followed with the Reuter negotiating committee—Lord Layton, of the News Chronicle, Mr. J. R. Scott, of the Manchester Guardian, and Mr. Christopher J. Chancellor, Reuter's General Manager.—Reuter.

FILM WRITERS SENTENCED

Washington, May 21. Two film writers, John Howard Lawson and Dalton Trumbo, were each sentenced to a year in prison and fined $1,000 today for contempt of Congress after being denied new trials.

Both were accused of refusing to tell the House Un-American Activities Committee last autumn whether they were Communists.

Mr. Lawson and Mr. Trumbo were released on bail pending appeal.—Reuter.

Church Criticisms Termed "Bosh"

London, May 21. The Scottish Free Presbyterian Synod of Inverness today joined the criticism of Princess Elizabeth for enjoying herself on a Sunday afternoon in Paris.

To the criticism, which was begun on Wednesday by the General Assembly of the Free Church of Scotland, the Archdeacon of Lewis, the Venerable J. H. L. Morrell, replied "that is bosh."

After pointing out that the Royal couple, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip, had faithfully attended services before attending the races and going out to dinner, the prelate observed: "of the criticism 'it is an example of the middle-headed thinking that is becoming common among us'."—Associated Press.

Hodge's Note To Korotkov

London, May 21. Lt-Gen John R. Hodge, American occupation commander in Southern Korea, today protested against Russia's "high handed, unjustifiable" action in cutting off electricity to Southern Korea, and warned that power must be restored before the United States pays any more on back electricity bills.

In a letter to the Soviet occupation chief, Lt.-Gen. G. P. Korotkov, General Hodge repeated his suggestion that the Russians set "the time and place" for a Soviet-American conference on electricity problems.

The Russians have been insisting that negotiations be carried on by the Koreans instead of the Soviets and Americans.

General Hodge left the way open for possible compromise by saying, "Such a conference should, if necessary, include Korean experts from both zones in similar past conferences."

After noting that power from the North was cut off at noon on May 14, General Hodge said, "Since you, as Soviet commander in control of North Korea, are responsible for acts in your zone, it is my duty to protest to you against this high-handed action."

Britain has completed proposals for talks on a new trade pact with Russia, the United Press learned from authoritative sources today.

Negotiations are expected to start shortly, presumably next month, in Moscow.

Official sources admitted that experts and Departmental officials had been preparing proposals covering a wide field and could be ready for talks on short notice.

They envisaged discussions of a long-term treaty with Russia extending over a period of several years, providing for substantial increases in the volume of trade in both directions.

The forthcoming Anglo-Russian negotiations were envisaged by the agreement signed last December in Moscow, when Russia and Britain agreed on an exchange of goods to be carried out along stipulated schedules.

Britain is known to insist on diversifying her trade arrangements from political issues and to be anxious to expand trade with the East, including the Soviet Union.—United Press.

They said the ideological level of literature had risen since the Party decree 20 months ago; but "serious political mistakes and ideological distortions are still cropping up." L.F. Illichev, deputy chief of the Party's administration of propaganda, told a conference of publishing house workers.

"The Soviet publishing business, regardless of the type of literature it is publishing, cannot be a mail box which accepts everything given to it," said Illichev.

He said publishing must be an ideological fortress on which should be crushed all and every attempt to slip through ideology

MILITARY BASES IN AFRICA

Seoul, May 21.

It was disclosed today that Belgium is one of the first European countries to follow Britain's lead in creating a military base in Africa to which the Government would retire if its homeland is overrun in war.

Recommendations for the creation of a Belgian base in the Congo were made by the Parliamentary commission at work during the past 14 months on army reorganization.

The Defense Minister, Raoul de Fraiture, disclosed the recommendations, which also include the establishment of a Belgian Army of 33,000 men instead of the 45,000 force in existence in 1940.—United Press.

Boys Pilot Stolen Aeroplane

Oklahoma City, May 21.

Two fifth grade boys aged 11 and 12 will tell a Judge on Saturday how they skipped school, stole a plane, flew it 150 miles, landed safely in a pasture, stole a horse and finally landed in jail.

The 11-year-old boy told officers that he learned to fly by reading comic books. His father, a well-known attorney, said the youth "rads" everything he gets his hands on concerning aviation.

Both youths took an Ercoupe plane from the airport here and flew it to a place eight miles northwest of Cheyenne, Oklahoma, where "we got lost and decided that we had better try to find directions back home." Thinking that they were only a few miles from home the boys "borrowed" a horse and rode into Cheyenne where they were arrested.—United Press.

THE HONG KONG SUNDAY HERALD, MAY 23, 1948.

KEITH BUTLER, a special "Sunday Herald" correspondent puts a grim picture into perspective. The coming struggle, he says, may decide the fate of more than one country

GREECE--THIS IS WAR

Nobody has any illusions in Greece about the real nature of the struggle in the Greek mountains.

"General" Marcos Vafades' men are not "bandits." They are soldiers well-armed, uniformed, even, disciplined, fighting a well-planned strategic campaign to include Greece in the Russian orbit.

Bucking them, supplying them with arms and ammunition, bases, hospitals, training camps, transport for re-grouping behind the frontier line and a thousand other advantages are Greece's Russian-dominated northern neighbours—Albania, Yugoslavia and Bulgaria. And behind them Soviet Russia herself.

On the Greek side is the Greek Army of 132,000 men. Britain has trained and equipped this Army on a modern scale with £33,000,000 worth of weapons and equipment. From Britain the Greek Navy has received 40 vessels of various types, and the Greek Air Force has been supplied with a number of Spitfire squadrons and transport and reconnaissance aircraft.

Equipped To British Scale

But such has been the pressure of the guerrillas during the last year and so urgent the need to end the war so that the country could proceed to its urgently needed peaceful reconstruction and rehabilitation, that the Americans were obliged to divert £43,000,000 worth of their aid to Greece for the last year solely to military supplies.

Now a further £50,000,000 worth of military aid is to be supplied during the coming year. With this British and American money the Greek Army has been equipped on the scale of a modern British army of the same size.

In fact this gift of British and American money to the Greek Army is an investment by us to keep Greece and the Greek approaches to the Eastern Mediterranean out of Russian hands.

If ever Greece fell to "General" Marcos Vafades and became just one more of the Communist States of South-East Europe, the resulting Russian hold on this part of the world would be a major blow to the British-American Middle-Eastern strategy. With the Red Army in Greece, the Red Air Force on Greek ports, Russia could control the whole Eastern Mediterranean.

Malta and Cyprus would be eliminated as useful bases for the British fleet; the Dardanelles would become Russian Straits; Turkish resistance, in case of threats, would be a matter of weeks—and Britain and America would have a tough struggle and a bitter one to keep their hold on the Middle East with all the advantages on the Russian side.

The Stakes

These are the stakes behind the guerrilla war in the Greek mountains. They explain why Russia and her satellites on the one side and Britain and America on the other are giving so much in money and material support to the two contestants—Marcos' guerrilla army and the Greek National Army.

The struggle in Greece is bitter. It is felt by every man, woman and child in this 7,000,000-strong nation. (It is worth remembering that the total population of Greece is less than that of Greater London.)

In Greece you are back in a wartime atmosphere, where the whole life of the nation is dominated by the emergency.

All over Greece the struggle is going on without respite. The confirmed figures of guerrilla losses over the last year show that the fighting is on a war-scale.

In twelve months the Greek Army has killed (and counted the corpses of) 10,000 Communist guerrillas in mountain battles and captured 4,500.

Those whom the terrible conditions of mountain warfare, especially in the winter snows, have driven to surrender, number 6,000.

On the Greek Army side the losses have been less, but heavy, especially, by proportion among officers—due to the bitterness and hand-to-hand nature of this type of fighting.

Twelve months ago it was estimated that the total fighting force of the guerrillas was about 13,500 men. Now their number is estimated to be about 30,000.

They have replaced their losses and doubled their recruiting from the areas under their control.

Although they have increased their numbers, the guerrillas have undergone a noticeable drop in morale and fighting spirit.

This Spring will be the climax of this phase of the struggle for Greece. Both sides are planning their big all-out offensive.

Marcos has broadcast a summons to Greek Air Force personnel to join his force; and at the same time the guerrillas have built aerodromes in territory under their control near Lake Prespa, where the Greek, Yugoslav and Albanian frontiers join.

These may be used as decoys and cover for air support given to Marcos from over the frontier.

Unidentified aircraft drop supplies almost nightly to guerrillas operating in parts of Southern Greece and unidentified submarines have several times been reported in Aegean waters.

International Brigades

There are persistent reports of International Brigades, recruited among the Communists and adventurers of Europe and shipped via Italy to Yugoslavia and the Greek General Staff has often had the impression that the guerrilla attacks have been organised and directed by foreign military experts.

But within a few weeks the Greek Army will launch its long-planned long-prepared and long-awaited general attack to clean up the guerrilla menace once for all. Special roads have been built in difficult mountainous areas of Epirus to carry the 28-pounder artillery up to support the attack. Forces have been concentrated and regrouped, and the Greek Army is now pouising its last bout.

There is an air of confidence amongst the Greek General Staff, and this is shared by Lieutenant-General James A. Van Fleet, of the United States Army Group and by the British Military Mission.

The Risks Are High

But to the hopes of the Greek Army and the American and British advisers there is a big "IF."

There is every possibility that the guerrillas can be rendered impotent within Greek territory—if no additional support to them, or intervention on their behalf when pressed, comes from Greece's northern neighbours.

How far will Russia and her satellites allow their Communist catspaw, "General" Marcos Vafades, to be squeezed out of Greece?

The risks are high and so are the stakes. The fate of Greece—and of world peace—may be decided this summer.

POLICE STATE -- POLISH STYLE

The only interest shown in Poland about the proposed suspension of the death penalty in Britain, and all the old palaver about flogging, consists of a rather cynical smile. For it is safe to say that many of the Poles who read the news intended to queue up that same day with pathetic parcels of food and medicine destined to alleviate the unspeakable lot of the 7,000 wretches now incarcerated by the Polish Security Police.

It is no fun being in prison in Poland. To begin with you are not arrested and you are not charged. In the full traditions of totalitarian states at dawn—and invited on such flimsy excuses as... an anonymous letter complaining about your wife... explain yourself to authority. It is quite possible that your "arrest" has been caused by the bribe offered for that purpose to the police. When a Pole is arrested the odds are that he recollects the words of Scripture "an enemy hath done this".

The terror caused before the war by such titles as Gestapo S.S. or G.P.U. was no worse than that felt by the average Pole when the dreaded letters "U.B." (common name for the Security Police) is mentioned. In fact it is worse. During the war A fought B but now in this tormented country it is Pole against Pole.

There is No Hope

A coldly calculated method of breaking down morale and that spirit which makes manhood and womanhood has been worked out. Eight to ten men are confined together in sub-basements sleeping on dirty straw strewn about a concrete floor. The atmosphere is stifling: there is no hope.

PRISONERS ONLY LEAVE THEIR CELLS FOR THE UNENDING INTERROGATIONS WHICH LEAVE MEN AND WOMEN BROKEN SHADOWS OF THE PEOPLE THEY WERE.

Let me tell you what "questioning" means in Poland today. It is carried on by tired, cynical but none the less competent relays of totally inhuman thugs. Four or five of them shoot their questions at you. They shoot them from the left hand side of the room and when the poor tormented wretch imagines that Nature is ill functioning, as far as he has heard an echo of the original question, he merely finds that they number 2 has repeated the question from the other end of the torture chamber. And so on, ad nauseam.

No one comes near Polish prisoners during the day though a bored Security policeman may have some "coffee" (without sugar) in the morning and a starved soup concocted out of unmentionable and unimaginable commodities. But at night it is different for indeed nobody in the prison thinks of leaving the prisoners alone. For you see, prisoners like to sleep and prisoners must be prevented from sleeping.

When what little remaining energy is at its lowest ebb prisoners are interrupted at intervals by the "confession" method.

I mentioned just now that rarely are these prisoners charged. Well, how can you charge, after all, without facts?

There is of course the "confession" of the accused man which nobody in this country imagines for one moment has been secured by anything but torture. And I do not mean only physical torture. You may care to beat the Security Police at their own game. You may refuse to answer if you do the chances are if the door of the interrogation chamber will open and your mother or your wife or your sisters will be ushered in and you will be forced to witness the same "interrogation" methods employed against them to force a "confession".

I close on one note. I am aware that the Polish Government may protest against what I say. They may say that it is false or exaggerated. In reply I would have to admit that I am not writing from first-hand observation. I have never been inside a Polish prison, for no member of the foreign press is ever allowed there. But I have talked to those few who have been released from gaol. How unanimous are their stories that I present them to you firmly convinced that they are correct. You yourselves will be inclined to agree when I tell you that none of them have a right to any form of redress and that furthermore a law has just been passed which disqualifies anybody who has been "detained" from owning a business for the remainder of his life. In other words he may starve.

By John Tilbury

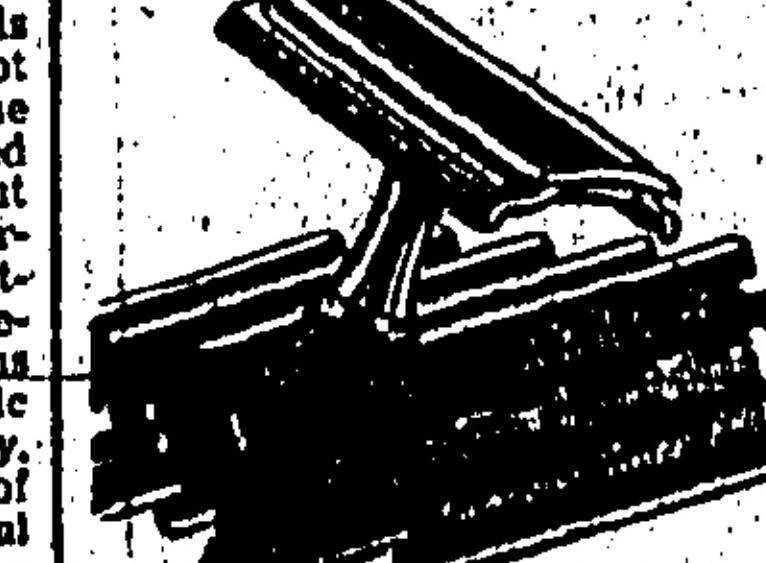

positive whose screams have indicated that not only has his spirit broken but his mind has gone, is to be called. And if it goes to your turn to be called it will not be your good fortune even to experience that little thing which is known as variety, for when you go up into the bright sunlight you may be sure that that number 1 and that number 2 will badger you with precisely the same questions as they asked you last night.

What have these people done to deserve this inhuman treatment? In most cases the 10% may have had a disagreement with the Russians when the Red Army was looting the country. A few have probably made innocent enough statements in an arbitrary moment of an anti-Communist nature.

Who are they all? Judging by the people who form the weary queues bearing parcels for the prisoners they are, if not the intelligent, the better educated section of the population. But there is a considerable proportion of the old Polish intelligentsia which organised internal resistance against the Germans and which is most antagonistic to Russian domination today.

These are the "tough boys" of Poland, for theirs is a spiritual resistance which carries on, despite fear and torment, and an almost total lack of nourishment. In the one determination we will not be bullied by Russians.

COMMUNIST PURGE ON IN YUGOSLAVIA

Prominent Reds Arrested

London, May 21.
Andrija Hebrang, a prominent Yugoslav Communist who was suddenly dismissed from the post of Minister of Light Industry in Marshal Tito's Government early this month, has now been arrested in Belgrade, authoritative reports reaching London disclosed today.

Reports that General Sreten Zujovic, another leading Communist who was dismissed from the Yugoslav Cabinet at the same time, has also been arrested, remain unconfirmed.

The real reason for the removal of these two men, both of them of old standing and close associates of Marshal Tito, is still obscure, but it may well be found in a split, possibly due to personal rather than ideological differences within the Communist Party of Yugoslavia.

Both men played leading parts in Marshal Tito's liberation movement from its earliest war-time phase.

Dispute Over The Lords

London, May 21.
A special session of the House of Commons will be called by the Government this summer if Lords insist on throwing out the Parliament Bill which curbs the Peers.

The purpose of the move is to safeguard the Government's plan to nationalise the steel industry in the life of the present Parliament, before the general election due in 1950.

The extra session, running from September to October, would legally be needed to enable the House of Commons to pass the Parliament Bill in three consecutive sessions in two years after its expected rejection by the House of Lords.

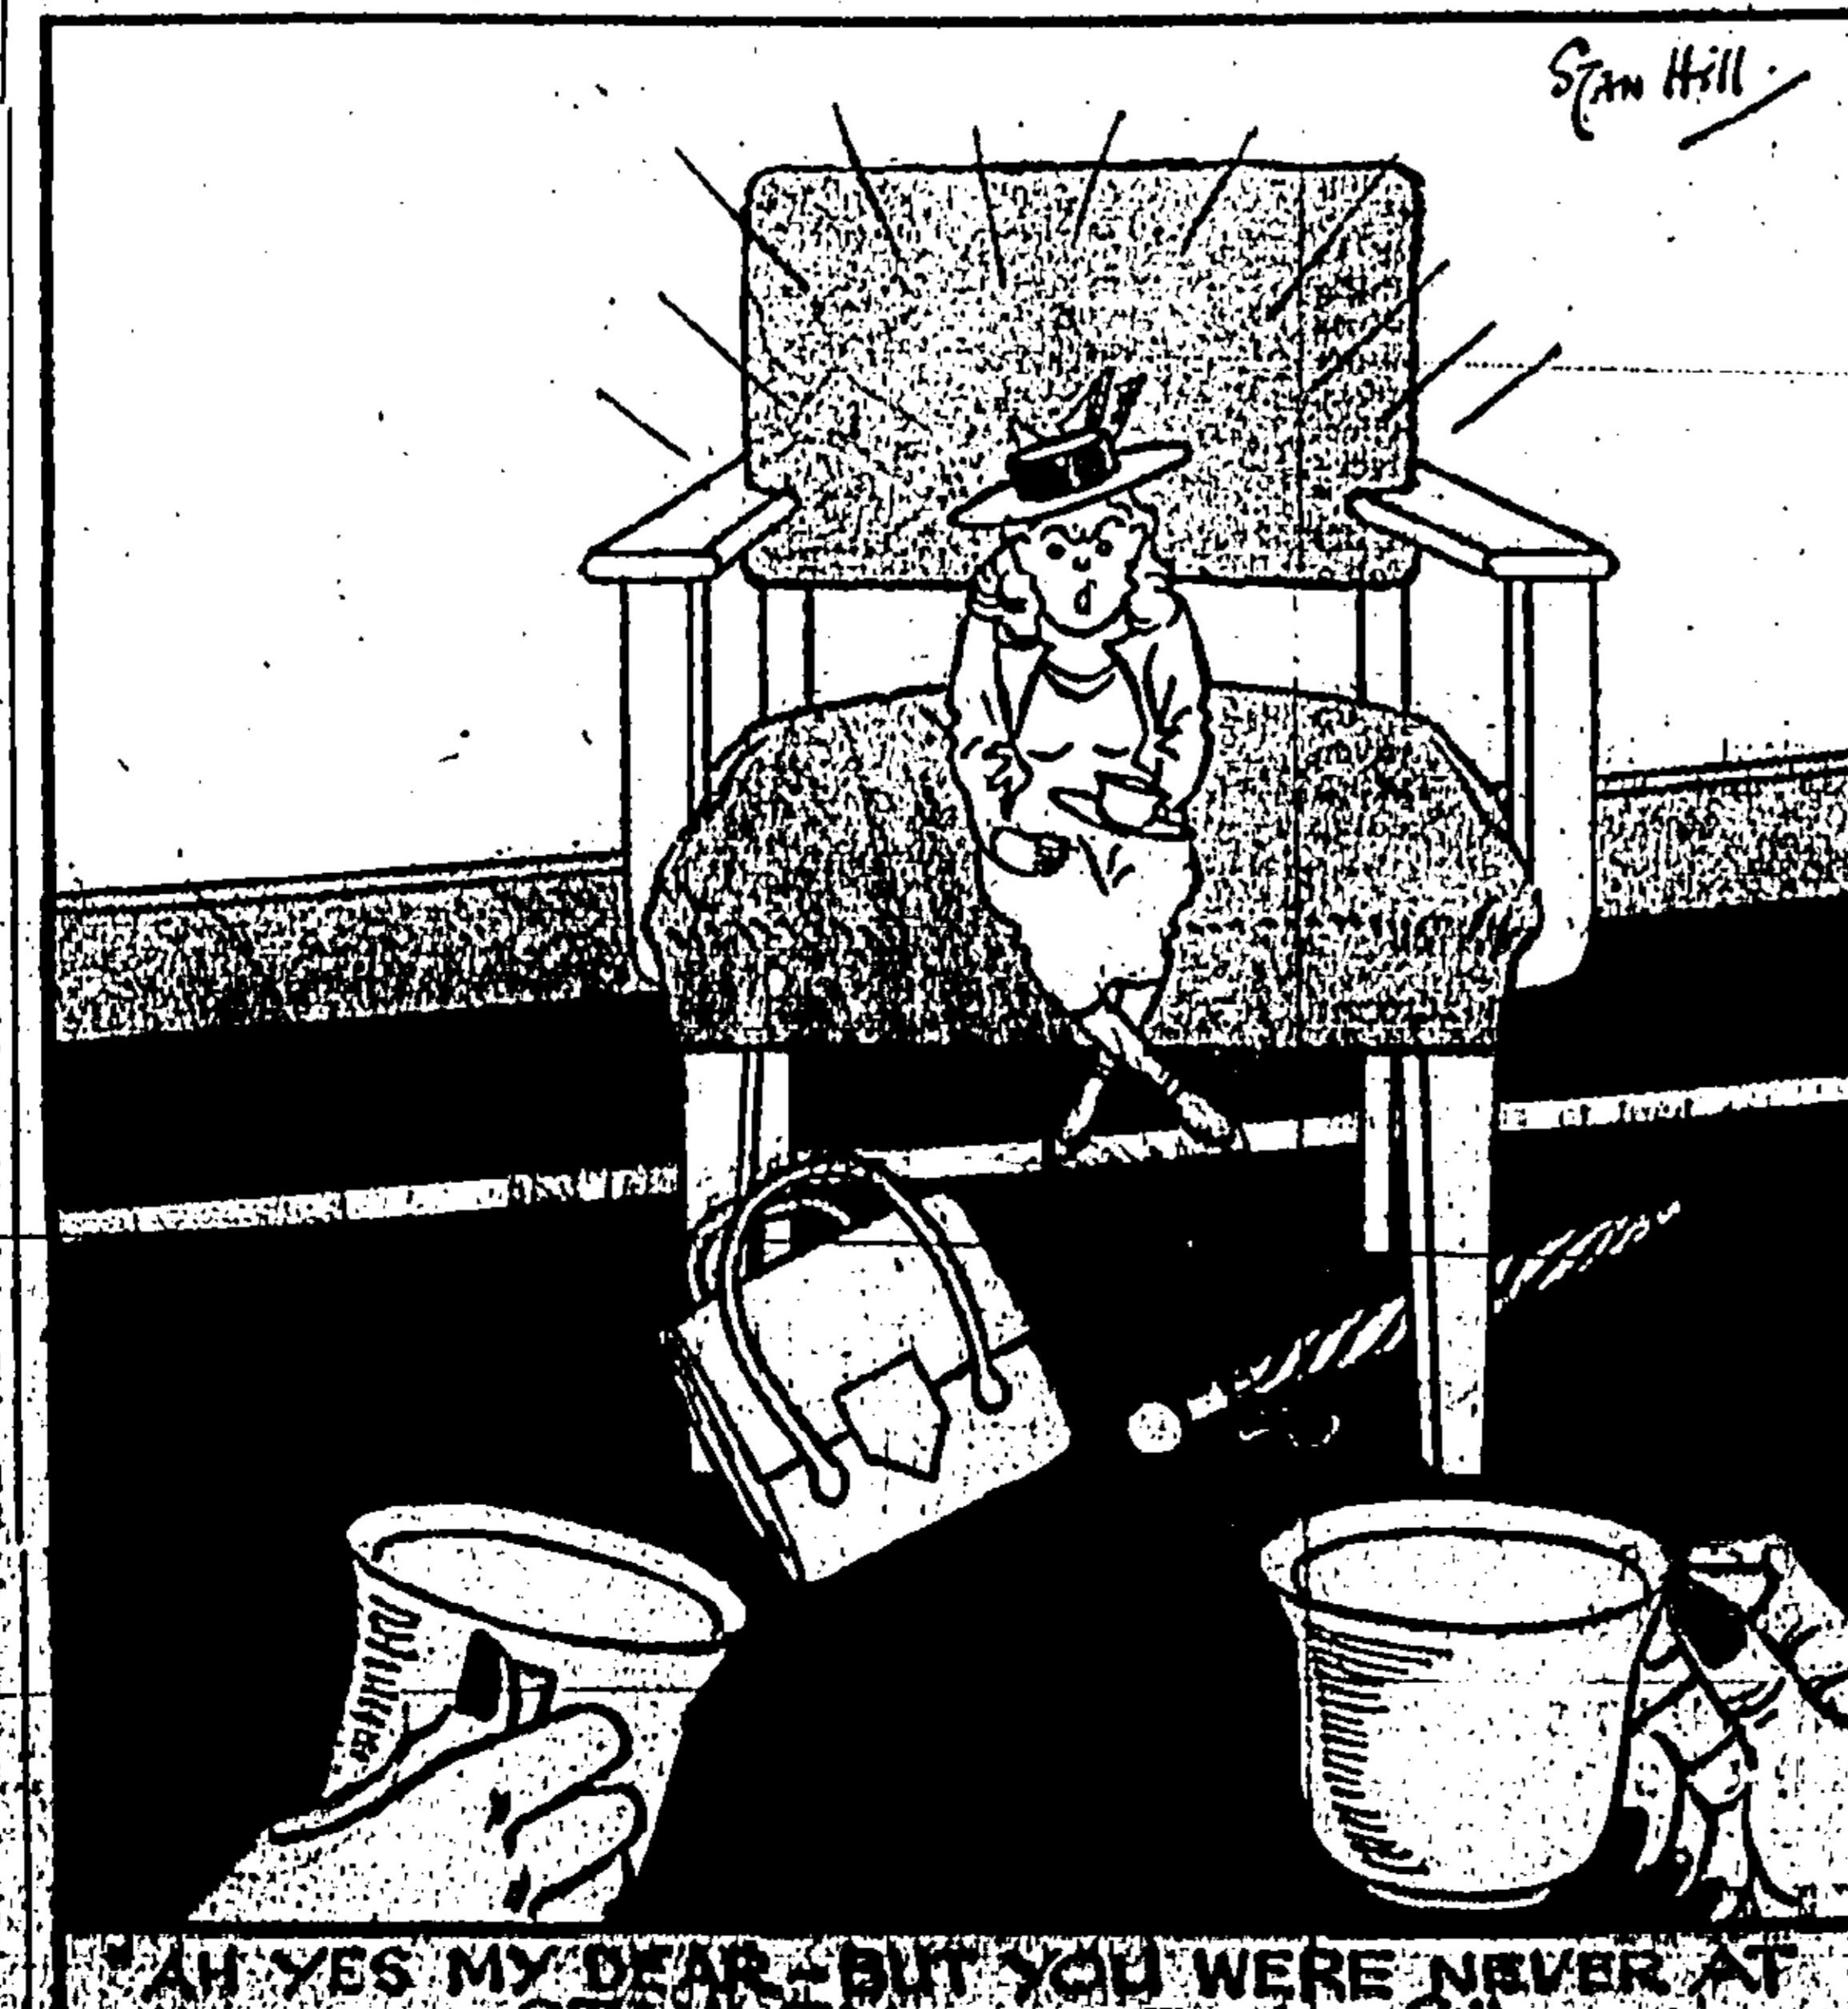

It then automatically becomes law despite the House of Lords' veto.

The Parliament Bill now before the House of Lords—the House of Commons has already passed it—will reduce the time the House of Lords may hold up a House of Commons Bill from two years to one year.

After it is passed, there will be just time for the steel nationalisation bill to become law before the general election.—Reuters.

Berlin, May 21.
The official Soviet newspaper Tagliche Rundschau said Russia has sent 1,500,000 German prisoners home. No estimate was made of the number still in Russia.—Associated Press.

Arab Threat To Quit

Baghdad, May 21.
Badia El Basam, the Iraqi Finance Minister, said today that the Arab States would withdraw from the United Nations if the Security Council accepted the United States resolution that the Arab attack in Palestine was a threat to international peace.

He said: "The Arab League has not yet decided on such action, but if the United Nations adopted this unjust decision, the Arabs will immediately withdraw."—Reuters.

EXPORT PRICES TOO HIGH

Glasgow, May 21.
The British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Stafford Cripps, said tonight Europe may find it necessary to lower export prices in order to find an "expanded market" for all industry.

General Zujovic was regarded as mainly responsible for the relatively successful stabilisation of the Yugoslav currency.

The arrest of M. Hebrang has also been linked by some observers with the recent trial of certain Slovene Communists and it has been suggested that the first serious purge of the Communist Party of Yugoslavia is now under way.—Reuters.

Britain's 500 MPH Jets

Washington, May 21.
Senator Owen Brewster, Republican, Maine, said today that the British expect to have jet-propelled transport planes ready to fly the Atlantic at 500 miles per hour within 12 to 18 months.

Brewster said England is America's "greatest rival in the air" and is spending between £6,250,000 and £12,500,000 a year developing jet and other new modes of flight. He added that this amounts to the "use of our money to do this job" in view of the loan to Britain and expected aid under the European recovery programme.

He said that Government-owned British airways had losses of more than £10,000,000 in each of the past two years while competing with privately-owned United States airlines for trans-ocean worldwide air traffic.—Associated Press.

Mine Tragedy

Dante, Virginia, May 22.
Six miners were crushed to death in a cave-in of the No. 2 mine of the Clinchfield Coal Corporation last night.

Five others, including a crew foreman, escaped with scratches.

The reports indicated collapse of supporting timbers in a section of the pit caused an estimated 50 tons of coal to crash down on the six men.

The bodies of the victims were extricated after four hours of digging by a 40-man rescue crew.—United Press.

Compromise Plan To Save Draft

Washington, May 21.
A compromise plan to save the draft by eliminating compulsory service for 18-year-olds was reportedly taking shape in the Senate.

House Republicans are strongly urging such a move. They fear the House will kill any draft including 18-year-olds.

Senate Republican leaders were said to be ready to agree with the House.

The plan would wipe out the provision of the Senate bill requiring youths of 18 to take a year's training in army camps within the United States. However, 18-year-olds would still be allowed to volunteer for a year, as provided in the present version.

The bill also calls for a two-year draft of men aged 19-23. That is the only provision of the House draft bill which is awaiting Rules Committee clearance for floor action. If the proposed change is made, the Senate Armed Services Committee, sounding out members on the compromise, may offer it as an amendment on the Senate floor next week if the majority backs it.

The Senate bill is not expected to come up for floor action before the middle of next week. The present version would draft 18-year-olds if volunteers fell short of the 161,000 yearly goal set in the measure. The chairman of the House Rules Committee (Rep. Leo Allen) does not expect to clear the House draft version for floor action before June 1. In the meantime, he is holding hearings on a substitute bill under which enlistees would get US$500 yearly bonuses for volunteering.—United Press.

deney towards more natural waist-lines. But the movement against the New Look does not mean the end of the full skirt. Both full and pencil skirts are in line with the latest trends.

There are several reasons for this anti-New Look movement among British women in particular.

Perhaps the main one is that it is a restricted style and does not suit many thousands of women. Just as important is the fact that clothes rationing has taught women in this country "dress caution." Too, women today must buy clothes which will tone with their other accessories.

Incidentally, the short knee-length skirt is likely to disappear faster than the New Look.

As the long skirts disappear you will find no mourners among the dress trade. The manufacturers are standing together waving the fashion good-bye. So good-bye New Look. Welcome London Line.

Scarves on Parade

There's something so gay and colourful about the current vogue for scarves! You stand before your mirror, arrange the scarf just so, and off you go.

Perhaps you glance in a mirror after a time. The scarf is askew. So you plan to buy a scarf pin the next time you're in town.

But why wait for that day? Every woman's dressing table holds trinkets that can hold a scarf in place and be decorative, too. A lovely turquoise ring will secure a thin silk scarf in a colourful way.

One, Two, Buckle . . .

A hammered silver buckle can be used, if you double the scarf ends firmly through the slots.

And even a stiff bracelet can serve as a scarf anchor if you practice with the dexterity of a Girl Scout at tying knots. Yes, it's a challenge to tie a scarf in a different way.

And it can add distinction if you use odd bits of jewellery you have to hold a scarf firmly in place.

STARS' SECOND-HAND DEAL

Because there are thousands of women in the United States—including Hollywood itself—who seem to get some kind of thrill out of wearing the cast-off clothing of screen stars, Dorothy Richmond is on her way to making a fortune in double-quick time.

Miss Richmond, a pretty ex-show girl and model, has established "Gowns of the Stars," one of the most unique businesses in Hollywood and certainly one of the most profitable.

This smart young woman simply buys up gowns and other apparel worn by stars in pictures and then sells them to women at a handsome profit. In her tiny shop on Hollywood's Sunset Boulevard, Miss Richmond is selling hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of second-hand clothing a year, and only wishes she could get more cast-offs to supply the ever-growing demands of her customers.

Anxious For Undies

She not only sells dresses, suits and coats worn by the stars in pictures but even gets requests for underwear, including brasieres and girdles worn by screen celebrities. There are evidently fine women who are willing to pay fancy prices for the privilege of wrapping themselves in a girdle that once held Lana Turner's tummy in place. Miss Richmond tries to satisfy all of her customers, whether it be a fancy brassiere or a pair of shoes.

The bulk of Miss Richmond's business is in clothing worn by stars on the screen. These seem to have a greater appeal for her customers.

Some women, for instance, will see a frock being worn on the screen by one of their favourite stars and they will immediately contact Miss Richmond and beg her to get it for them. She had no fewer than 1000 requests from all over the United States for a tailored suit John Crawford wore in a scene in "Possessed."

Bulk Bargains

She refused to disclose what she had paid the studio for the suit, though it can be taken for granted that she made a very handsome profit, because she buys from studios in bulk lots. Miss Richmond started out just buying clothing worn on the screen, but now the stars are asking her to buy cast-offs from their private wardrobes.

Wherever possible, "Gowns of the Stars" lets its customers know just who originally owned and wore the clothes and in which picture they appeared. This is one of the strongest selling points.

"My customers," Miss Richmond said, "get a great thrill when I can tell them that such-and-such a gown was worn by Lana Turner or Betty Grable in such and such a picture. I guess they like to boast to their friends that the gown they are wearing was once worn by a famous star in a popular picture. They usually are willing to pay much more for a gown by a famous star on the screen."

Fashion For Starlets

She revealed that among her best clients were Los Angeles society women and movie starlets. She pointed out that the starlets do not earn enough money to dress as they would like to, so

Pleats Aplenty

DEMURE EVENING GLAMOUR IN LONDON'S SPRING COLLECTION: Pleating of every description, but especially fan pleating, is important in the new London collections. Here is an ankle-length dress by Hardy Amies in pink crepe with fan pleats from the waist, with the pleats intricately arranged over the hips and pleated trimming on the bodice.

This dress is worn with a pleated navy-blue coat (right), pleated from the narrow shoulders; the wide bell sleeves are also pleated, and a large rose is tucked into the front.

SPIRIT OF SPRING.—It's the same everywhere in Spring-time: women must have something new in millinery. This A.P. Photo just received from Russia shows a young girl (left) seeking the aid of a saleslady to assist with the purchase of a new Spring hat at a Leningrad millinery store. It seems wide-brimmed styles and bonnets abound.

HOME REMEDIES FOR CHILDREN

For many children's complaints there are simple remedies, ingredients for which are found in most home. The following remedies are effective and cheap, with the advantage of being readily to hand when the need arises.

A piece of wasding soaked in castor oil and bandaged round a finger will heal those festers round the nail commonly called milk rot.

Bicarb. soda mixed to a thick paste with vinegar will kill ring-worm in a few applications.

Dry powdered borax applied to Baby's head after bathing will cure cradle cap. It also seems to prevent re-infection.

Relief For Boils

Bolts, to which adolescents are often subject, can be relieved painlessly. Put Epsom-salt in a dish, warm in oven till powdered, mix it with a little glycerine, put the mixture on cotton wool and pad with linen.

This mixture not only cures the boil, but prevents the ring of secondary boil that often follows the first.

For whooping-cough, $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon castor oil and $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon glycerine mixed gives relief.

For severe colds and bronchitis try this old tonic:

Put 4 fresh eggs in an air-tight jar (shells unbroken), squeeze juice of 4 large lemons over and stand air-tight for 3 days, then beat together, breaking the shells. Strain, add 2 tablespoons olive oil, 2 of sugar and a little honey. Bottle, leave cork out for 1 hour, then cork tightly. This keeps indefinitely. Dose: One wineglassful once or twice a day according to need.

Am Temple
Dissolving a marriage "contract"

"A business or professional contract is dissolved if there is lack of ability to carry out the duties. But what of the intelligent woman tied by the contract of marriage to a husband so inefficient that she has to take on a full-time job and do all the housekeeping as well?"

Please advise those of us with husbands who are more of a liability than an asset, who find marriage a grim ordeal—equally grim for the inefficient ones who are aware of their failings. —MARRIED.

This problem takes a whole whack of untangling. First there is the confusion of the marriage with the business contract. The relationships in these are so dissimilar that comparison gets near absurdity.

Then the problem is not so much in the woman earning as in her having the double job. That's the really grim ordeal. It's hopelessly unfair and bound to cause resentment.

A married woman who works should be able to enjoy working and earning. It should not be regarded as taking on the husband's duties but as adding to the family pool of earnings.

Something can be done about this husband. He is not the natural drone. He is made all the more unhappy aware of his rutility by his wife's very efficiency, and her resentment drives him ever further into his inefficiency.

What's wanted is a conciliation committee between these two, a happier, freer, more realistic attitude to money and earnings and a right down purposeful search for ways in which the man can be made to feel he is pulling his weight.

Let all the available intelligence be applied to that. Let this be a real partnership in which there is facility of discussion and elasticity of ideas, a pooling of abilities free from old laboriousness. Even if it doesn't work out economically, at least there can be comradeship, and that makes life happy, even if it is hard.

SNYDER SOUNDS WARNING

Definite Limits To American Help

Enormous Debts Incurred

Miami, May 21. Mr. John W. Snyder, Secretary of the Treasury, speaking here today of the United States' desire "to help deserving countries", said: "We must emphasize that our resources have a definite limitation."

Mr. Snyder, addressing the second annual Foreign Trade Forum, was referring to American investments in Latin America.

He added: "We have incurred an enormous debt in helping to prosecute the recent war. We have exhausted a substantial part of our national resources in the defeat of the forces of domination and destruction.

Record British Imports

London, May 21. Record-breaking imports in April resulted in a setback to Britain in its attempt to balance import-export trade.

The Board of Trade reported the value of imports for the month amounted to £186,200,000 or £6,000,000 higher than the previous post-war record in July of last year.

The total also exceeded by £2,800,000 the pre-war peak of January 1920.

Exports amounted to £120,400,000 and re-exports to £5,300,000. This left an adverse balance of trade of £54,500,000. —Associated Press.

IZVESTIA AND WESTERN UNION
Moscow, May 21. The Izvestia said today that the Western European Union could not be accepted as a regional agreement within the framework of the United Nations.

The agreement was made with the Netherlands Indies Organisation for the marketing of sugar and the Netherlands Indies government. The sugar is expected to be delivered in July and August.

The price agreed upon was said to be approximately the four cents a pound, raw value, recently paid for 1,000 tons of Cuban sugar bought for use in Europe. —Associated Press.

BRITISH SECURITIES
SOLD AT LOW PRICES ON WALL STREET

New York, May 22.

British securities are being sold by American owners in New York today at prices which figure out to as low as 1.80 dollars per pound sterling, financial sources said.

Traders dealing in international securities said the volume of transactions is estimated to average about 20,000 pounds worth of Securities daily.

Tokyo, May 22. Japan will shortly receive a $60 million loan from the Bank of America to buy industrial raw materials, it was learned from reliable sources today.

The loan is the first to be consummated since Aug. 15, 1947, when General MacArthur's Headquarters announced it was in the market for private loans to assist in the reconstruction of Japan's export trade.

As security, General MacArthur's Headquarters is holding $137 million worth of gold in the Bank of Japan.

Disagreement between SCAP and American banks over interest rates have prevented earlier efforts to obtain loans, SCAP officials stated. Last year it was hoped that $137 million worth of gold would bring large private loans, enabling Japan to import approximately $500 million worth of raw materials.

The agreement with the Bank of America will not be consummated until the papers are flown to San Francisco for signature by the bank's president.—Reuter.

Relief For Mukden

Shanghai, May 22. China's major airlines—CAT, CAC and CNAC—are co-operating in flying to isolated Mukden 3,300 tons of urgently needed farm machinery and seeds.

The first 20 tons of machinery has already been delivered according to the United States China Relief Mission, and the remaining cargo consisting mainly of corn, rice and buckwheat seed is now being rushed by plane from Peking and Tientsin to Mukden.

Each of the three airlines is said to have mustered all necessary equipment to meet a two-flight-a-day schedule to Mukden to ensure delivery of the vital seeds.

Farm machinery already in Mukden was shipped by CRM of the seeds to enable the farmers in the area to prepare the ground. The shipment includes American-made tractors, ploughs and plough shares.—Reuter.

Dewey Leading Stassen

Portland, Ore., May 22. Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York is leading in a close-fought contest against Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota for Oregon's pledged 12-man Republican Presidential delegation.

The trend of mounting returns from Friday's primary election pointed to a Dewey victory which could snap the string of Stassen primary triumphs in Wisconsin, Nebraska and Pennsylvania.

Incomplete returns from 710 of the state's 1,861 precincts give Dewey 29,133 and Stassen 25,582.

Political observers believe a defeat for Stassen in Oregon which appears indicated on the basis of the early count would constitute a serious setback to his two-year-old candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination.

The winner of the Oregon campaign will take the pledge of the 12-man delegation. The delegation cannot be split and the delegates are instructed and pledged to vote for their candidate as long as he has a reasonable chance for nomination.—United Press.

Buyers Attracted

2. Liquidation by speculators who bought British securities at the beginning of the war or later. During the war and since the securities rate ranged between 2 and 3.60 dollars, according to the fortunes of war.

These rates attracted many buyers, brokers said, especially in 1946, when victory inspired confidence in Britain's economy and the hope that trading restrictions would be lifted.

Now, however, these security holders have given up waiting, or see no prospects of a rise in the market. Their transactions involved largely private shares of movie and mining firms, brokers said.

Under present trading conditions, traders and buyers of British securities paying 4 per cent actually receive 8 per cent because of discount in rates, since dividends severely limit the import of currency into Britain. Dealing in British securities, however, are legitimate although circumscribed by certain restrictions.

Brokers said the rate is set by operation of supply and demand in the market, with the present depressed rate caused by a preponderance of sellers wishing to get out from under."

As an example, brokers cited the United Kingdom funding 4 per cent bonds of 1960-1960. The asked price in Wall St. has been ranging around 200 dollars for each £100 bond. In London, the price quoted for these bonds is £112. Thus the pound rate for the securities in New York is around 1.80 dollars, brokers said.

Other British Government bonds and shares in industrial firms have suffered an equal drop in New York market, they said.

Wall Street traders cited two major sources of supply of British securities which are depressing prices:

1. Liquidation of estates, as original buyers of the bonds die. Brokers said that while the original owner might have been reluctant to sell at current rates

The plant was to seize Nankou, then sweep towards the suburbs of Peiping.

Only five Red regiments, consisting of 7,500 men, went into action but were so desirably beaten that the main Red forces which were waiting for a killing, changed their plans, the spokesman said.

The spokesman, Major General Yen Yu Wen, said the battle against the five regiments started at 2 a.m. on Tuesday and ended at 12 p.m. on Wednesday.

Two regiments were wiped out completely and the other three suffered 70 percent losses—5,150 men in all.

At this disaster the main Red forces lost courage to try to sweep into the suburbs of Peiping, as intended, he said. Instead they turned north.

Trains Resumed

A part gathered in the vicinity of Nationalist-held Kangchuan on the Peiping-Suyuan railroad, 45 miles north-west of Peiping. The rest crossed the railroad and marched near the highway town of Yenching, 45 miles north-north-west of Peiping.

Train services between Peiping and Shanhua were resumed yesterday following repairs to stretches damaged by the Reds. Fu Tso-yi's headquarters announced.

The headquarters said fighting around Yinghsien, in Shansi, which today entered its 37th day of siege, is now confined to skirmishes.—Associated Press.

Korean Terrorist Suppression Plans

Seoul, May 21.

Detective chiefs from all parts of South Korea will meet here tomorrow to decide on plans to suppress terrorists, whose activities had made police guards necessary for all members of the newly-elected Legislative Assembly.

The terrorists failed to prevent the election, but have continued a campaign of murder, arson and sabotage. Dr. B. O. Chough, Director of the National Police, told Reuter today.

Political leaders such as Dr. Syngman Rhee, the prospective new President, have at last two men guarding their homes, and public officials are also being protected.

Detectives will accompany country members travelling to Seoul for the convocation of the National Assembly at the end of the month.

Dr. Chough said that Korea had never in her history known such brutality as had been shown in the past two years. These methods, he said, had been introduced by the Communists to terrorise the people.

Detectives at tomorrow's conference will study methods used to suppress the terrorists in the Chollapukto province in recent weeks.

Thirty-five members of Government departments, 23 civil court officials and 18 bank officials have been arrested in that province since the police confiscated terrorist documents and deciphered a code revealing terrorists' names. Reuter.

This general strike followed the killing of a farmer at Govigo on Thursday when striking farmers attacked a police force which arrested a Communist.

Meanwhile in the Province of Modeno, also in the North, where Communism still has its strongest backing, the Labour Chamber called a general four-hour strike for Monday in protest against the recent police action against strikers in small towns.

Christian labour groups in the Province refused to support the strike. United Press.

AUSTRALIANS SCORE 141 FOR ONE WICKET AGAINST THE MCC

London, May 22.

The Australian cricket tourists scored 141 runs for one wicket by lunch time today in their match against the M.C.C. at Lord's.

The gates were closed five minutes before the start on a shirt-sleeved crowd of 35,000 who saw the Australians when only 11, lose the left-hander Morris.

The pitch sometimes played awkwardly some balls from Edrich, keeping low and others jumping, and Morris, making a wild sweep, was leg-before to one which kept low.

Bradman, after getting quickly off the mark with a single, settled down with Barnes to some steady batting, which produced runs at one a minute as the wicket took came easier.

Bradman scored all round the wicket with his customary effortless ease and completed 52 in 70 minutes. When at 55, Bradman survived a leg appeal by Young.

Edrich, who had an opening spell of eight overs for 20 runs and one wicket, returned for the last ten minutes before lunch but nothing could check the partnership which had added 130 in 110 minutes.

Stranded Athletes

Shanghai, May 22.

More than 200 athletes from North China and Manchuria, who were stranded in Shanghai after the end of the National Athletic Meet, have been offered passage by two shipping firms and several individuals after reports of their plight appeared in our Chinese paper.

The first batch of Northern athletes, who were sent by 17 provinces and municipalities on shoe-string budgets, will probably sail this morning aboard a China Merchants Steamship Navigation Company steamer.

The majority of the competitors for the N.A.M. came to Shanghai aboard a Chinese Navy vessel which, however, has had to leave without them because of some important official visitation.—Reuter.

OLYMPIC TEAM BEATEN

Singapore, May 22.

The Chinese Olympic football team was beaten by one goal to nil by a Singapore Chinese team here today.

The goal was scored in the first half from a penalty.

The Olympians made desperate efforts to equalise following the interval but the defence of the home team withstood the barrage of Chinese attacks.—United Press.

"Race Of Century" Turns Out Flop

Los Angeles, May 22.

Mal Patton demonstrated again he is the number one candidate for the U.S. Olympic's sprint team but the heralded "race of the century" last night turned out to be the blunder of the year.

The University of Southern California star clipped his arch rival Lloyd Le Beach of Panama by two yards and seven other crack runners by more than that.

Then came the big disappointment.

A record crowd of almost 60,000 turned out for the race which was supposed to have been run at the Olympic distance of 100 metres.

But embarrassed officials of the 8th annual collector's relay belatedly discovered the distance had been measured off wrong and the runners actually covered only 99 yards 8 inches.

Patton's time was 9.4/10 seconds compared to the new world record time of 9.3/10 seconds he was credited with.
